Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Thompson H. Cooper (a probationer), Josiah Barker, William K. Norton. 3.

THOMPSON H. COOPER, son of Charles H. Cooper, was born in Selma, Ala. He was the second son of his parents, and inherited from them a frail physical constitution and a nervous temperament, but with his frailty of body he received a gifted mind and a heart naturally noble. His home was to him the cradle of Christian childhood, and it radiated with Christian light and doctrine. His parents were Methodists, and the atmosphere he breathed was free from all spiritual malaria and heartless criticism. He had before him the examples of those whose lives were hid with Christ in God, and whose devotion to the Church of their choice was constant and beautiful. His childhood evinced loyalty to his parents and respect and reverence for the Church. He had an eye for the beauties of nature, an ear attuned to its melodies, and a heart that was in deep sympathy with its great lessons of creation and providence. He loved to commune with fields and fountains; to roam over meadows and woods; birds, fishes, and all living creatures were his acquaintances and friends. He enjoyed young life, and delighted in the sports and pastimes of boyhood. He learned to love books. Descriptions of landscape and mountain scenery, biography, and history charmed and delighted him. In early manhood he took no pleasure in the drudgery of the schoolroom. The principles of mathematics and the subtleties of metaphysics were at first a great bore to him, but in college he readily learned to study, and made a good student. He greatly desired to become a man, and to attain an honorable position among men. If his health had permitted, he would have made a good scholar, and could have fitted himself for almost any life work that he might have chosen. He early became a Christian, gave his whole heart to God, and cast his lot among the people of the Most High. He had not been long in the Church when God laid his hand upon him for the work of the Christian ministry. This divine call sobered him, and he again took up his studies with redoubled interest and energy. But his health began to give way, and his friends soon perceived that he could not complete a full college course. But still he studied, and did his best to prepare himself for the duties of his high vocation. He entered the Alabama Conference, and soon gave promise of becoming an acceptable and useful minister of the gospel. He was devoted to his work; visited and preached with an earnestness that impressed his people. He did the best that he could to sow beside all intellectual and moral waters. He began to read books of every character that would develop his mind and refine and purify his style. His great purpose was to save himself and those committed to his pastoral care. To do this he perceived that he must possess stores of information, and both taste and skill in their use. As far as his health and strength would permit he did his best to look into the deep things of God in nature and revelation. In the pulpit he was always neat and tidy in person, chaste in language, and rich and apt in illustration. His utterance was rapid and unctuous, and he poured through his quivering lips the contents of a full and loving heart. His earnestness and propriety, dignity and gravity drew toward him the older and better informed in his congregation; while his grace and freedom of speech charmed the young people, and wooed them to the altars of the Lord his God. His brethren perceived that he was indeed called of God to the Christian ministry, and that ere long he would be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of God, giving to each his portion in due season." It was perceived that he was soon to become a popular and useful itinerant Methodist preacher. He soon met, loved and married a cultured and beautiful woman, in every way fitted by nature and education to become the wife of a Methodist preacher. But just as his young, consecrated manhood was beginning to bloom for the harvest of souls, which his brethren believed he was destined to reap, the infirmities of his body gave indication that his life was to be cut down in the morning of his usefulness and power. He struggled hard against the inroads of disease and death, and sought every source of relief within his reach, but his efforts were vain. He reconsecrated himself to God for life or death, and with the arm of faith took hold afresh upon the boundless resources of his Heavenly Father. He felt the presence of God in Jesus Christ, and knew that his Redeemer lived. He returned to his native State after having sought a drier climate and a more congenial atmosphere, but he was doomed for this life. He lingered a few weeks upon the confines of the grave, and then winged his flight to the home of the beautiful and true in heaven. It is sad to look upon his early grave, but it is sweet to remember that his spirit has entered the kingdom of life and health, where sickness and sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more. We shall see him again. In the morning of the resurrection, when God collects his spiritual jewels, he will come forth to shine as a star in the brightness of the celestial firmament forever and ever.

JOSIAH BARKER was born in the State of New York, February 11, 1817; and died in the city of Montgomery, Ala., July 9, 1894. He was thrice married. His second wife, Miss Payne, left him two children, a son and a daughter. His third wife, Miss Julia Heard, left him one child, a daughter. After coming to Alabama he practiced law for awhile in Tuscaloosa, and there made the firm friendship of some of the foremost men of that day. Removing to Pickens County, he was elected Judge of the Probate Court, and while holding this office was converted under the ministry of Rev. George Shaeffer, and was licensed to preach. This was in 1844. The following winter he joined the Alabama Conference. The Conference, from the very first, gave Brother Barker a good position, and this he maintained to the end of his varied ministry, never falling below it, and seldom rising above it. His appointments were worthy of a man of talents and piety, and his ability was seen in the increase of his membership and the edification of the Church. Wherever he went souls were converted and the people respected and loved him. His wives helped him much in the ministry, and the conduct of his children never discounted his influence with the people. From the parsonage as a center went out upon the congregations moral and religious forces almost as strong as those that emanated from the pulpit. In this respect he was eminently happy. His home was a quiet, cheerful, religious house, and his domestic life was truly a blessed one. In 1863 he was appointed Chaplain of the Fortieth Alabama Regiment, and he served as long as his health would permit. This was his only departure from the regular pastoral work of the ministry. Among his parishioners he walked as a Christian minister and a gentleman, conscious of the purity of his motives and cleanness of his record. His mind was of a peculiar type, so ardent and poetic as to be almost incapable of sustained analytic thought or logical argument; so that when he gazed upon the crucifixion of the Saviour, or contemplated the horrible doom of sin, his heart would melt with sympathy or bleed with anguish, and he would cry in most pathetic strains. Or when he thought of the risen and glorified Lord, and of heaven as the home of the saved, he would lose himself in rhapsodies of love and jubilant praise. He might not have been as cool and wise as others in planning campaigns against sin, but none was ever more ready to enter the battle, and in the thick of the fight no one was braver and truer than he. He went in with a shout, he fought with a shout; was always ready, was never afraid, had "faith and hope" for his motto, and came out victorious. In the days of his vigor he was fond of literature, and devoted much time to its cultivation. He always had some poem on hand, and occasionally wrote beautiful verses. He was a constant Bible reader and a man of much prayer, but poetry had for him an irresistible charm. He reveled in the Psalms and Prophecies and Revelation. The poetry in them filled his mind with grand and beautiful imageries. He dreamed dreams and saw visions. So upright, so loyal, so pure, so ardent, he was a most delightful man; and his integrity was always absolutely trustworthy. After his superannuation he made Montgomery his place of residence. Here in increasing feebleness he walked among the people, spotless in life, full of hope of immortality, and ready at any time to depart and be with Christ. "Nothing against him." Toward the last he became more exultant. Heaven seemed within touch, and he longed to go. He had a word of cheer and a hymn of praise for everyone that called to see him. The people were good to him. His daughter devoted her days and nights in assiduous, ceaseless, loving ministry to him. God's grace was the daily portion of his heart. His life was hid with Christ in God, and he was not, for God took him. Peacefully he fell asleep, and his spirit went to its longed-for home in heaven.

WILLIAM K. NORTON was born in Moore County, N. C., November 23, 1821; and died at Enon, Bullock County, Ala., August 13, 1894. He was the second son of Rev. John W. Norton, who in early life was for ten years a member of the South Carolina Conference. His mother's maiden name was Nancy A. Phillips, daughter of Lewis Phillips, of Moore County, N. C., and a sister of Rev. Charles Phillips, of the North Carolina Conference. When William was about four years old his father, having located, returned to his native home in South Carolina, where he remained two years preparatory to his going to Alabama. This move was made in 1828, and he settled near Clayton, in what is now Barbour County, where he spent the rest of his life. He had four sons in the ministry, one of whom, Rev. W. F. Norton, of the Florida Conference, is still living. William joined the Methodist Church on probation in October, 1838, and was converted in November, 1839, at a camp meeting in Henry County, under the ministry of Rev. Charles Strider. In the fall of 1840 he was licensed to exhort, and on October 16, 1841, he was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference held at Barbour Camp Ground, Rev. Thos. L. Boswell being the presiding elder. In November of that same year he was received on trial into the Alabama Conference at the session held in Mobile, and sent as junior preacher to the Cedar Creek Circuit, with Thomas L. Densler as preacher in charge and William Moores as presiding elder. On January 10, 1842, the young preacher, only about twenty years old, left his father's home and started out for his new field of labor, which he reached in due time. At the close of the first quarter he was transferred to the Bellville Circuit to supply the place of a young man who had left his work. In December of this year he attended his first session of the Conference, which was held in the city of Montgomery, and was reappointed to the Cedar Creek Circuit. At the session of the Conference held at Columbus, Miss., in December, 1843, he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Soule, and sent for the following year to the Glennville Colored Mission, where he remained two years. In March, 1846, at the Conference held in Mobile, he was ordained an elder by Bishop Andrew, and appointed to the Mt. Vernon Circuit, with Dr. Jesse Boring as the presiding elder.

After this he served the following charges: Centenary Circuit, 1847; Athens Circuit, 1848; Enterprise Station, 1849; Pensacola Station, 1850-51; Toulmanville Station, 1852; Camden Station, 1853-54; Suggsville Circuit, 1855-56; Glennville Circuit, 1857-58; Pensacola Station, 1859-60; Oak Hill Circuit, 1861-62; Lawrenceville Circuit, 1863-66; Enon and Midway, 1867-70; Hurtsville Circuit, 1871; Beulah Circuit, 1872-74; Hurtsville Circuit, 1875-78; Clayton and Louisville, 1879-80; Union Circuit, 1881; Mt. Hilliard Circuit, 1882-84; Elmore Circuit, 1885; Pleasant Grove Circuit, 1886-88; Salem Circuit, 1889-90. At the close of this year he was superannuated, and moved to his home in Enon, where he died. On October 19, 1854, he was married by Rev. Ebenezer Hern to Miss Martha A. Maon, daughter of L. W. Mason, of Camden, Ala. This good woman, who for many years shared with her husband the cares and privations of an itinerant life, still lives. At the time of his death Brother Norton was the oldest member of the Alabama Conference. For many years his name stood at the head of the list. He was naturally of a quiet, amiable disposition, and as chaste and refined in his manners as the purest woman. It was often said of him: "Behold a man in whom there is no guile." He was pure in his thoughts, gentle in his speech, and upright in his conduct. In his daily life he adorned the doctrines of Christ by his holy living. In his home, among the people of his charge, and out upon the great thoroughfares of life, he was the same gentle, upright man. Everywhere he was a shining light, and a constant rebuke to many of his brethren who were not as careful in their deportment as they ought to have been. He was human, and doubtless had his faults, but they were not often apparent. He was a model of neatness and order. Everything about him had its place, and was generally kept where it belonged. In his dress he was careful and neat, and always appeared genteel. As a preacher he was true and faithful to his high calling. For fifty-three years he sustained an unblemished ministerial character. Forty-nine years he was in the effective ranks, and in all these years there was never a shadow of complaint against him. Sometimes he felt oppressed by his appointments, but he did not murmur nor complain. He was always loyal, went cheerfully to his work, did it faithfully and well, and success generally attended his efforts. Scores and hundreds of souls were converted under his ministry. He was not a brilliant pulpit orator. His style was a little monotonous, and hence he did not impress and move an audience as much as some other men of less ability but different style. He was a good theologian, understood well the doctrines of his Church, and his sermons were generally well prepared, and would have read well if they had been in print. As a pastor he looked diligently after all the interests of the Church. The Church registers and records of Church Conferences were all neatly and correctly kept, and none but the names of the real, visible members of the Church were retained on the books. His congregations generally loved him, and the longer he remained among them the more he endeared himself to them. But his long and useful life is ended. At the close of 1890 his declining health forced him to take a superannuated relation, but he continued to preach occasionally and work in the Sunday school as long as he had strength. For several months previous to his death his friends discovered that he was rapidly declining, and that the end would soon come. For two or three weeks he was confined to his bed; patient and resigned, the same gentle, meek, uncomplaining Christian that he had been for more than half a century. A few days before his death he became unconscious, and said nothing of his future, but his testimony is written indelibly in his pure and holy life. On Sunday night, August 13, 1894, he quietly fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, and spent the following day among the holy angels, greeting kindred and friends on the other shore. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Life's toils are all over, life's battles are all fought, and life's work is done; enter now into the joy of thy Lord. On August 14 his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Enon, Rev. A. L. Sellers conducting the service, assisted by Rev. J. W. Solomon. He leaves a wife and six children, all grown but the youngest son. May God's richest, choicest, sweetest blessings be upon them all!

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? George Stevenson, William A. Wade, Samuel W. Haddaway, Charles M. Brown, William W. Hedrick. 5.

GEORGE STEVENSON, the second son of John and Frances Stevenson, was born September 20, 1810, on a farm owned by his father and belonging originally to the estate of Lord Abercom, in the county of Tyrone, in the province of Ulster, Ireland; and died in Stephens City, Frederick county, Va., on July 8, 1893. He was baptized in infancy by the Rev. Matthew Clark, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Ardstraw Bridge, of which his father was a ruling elder. His mother, previous to her marriage, had been a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. George, together with the other children, was taught the confession of faith and the shorter catechism. But when a boy of only twelve years, he felt that he could not subscribe to the doctrines in which his father had him so thoroughly drilled. In the providence of God, it so happened that he was permitted to attend a Wesleyan Methodist Church. The word preached made a lasting impression on George Stevenson. He was brought under the convicting power of the Spirit. He felt that he was under the wrath of the Almighty. In reference to his condition at this time, his private journal contains the following: "While the Spirit of God was at work with my heart I prayed often in private, sometimes using a kind of penance by kneeling upon stones that left indentations in my little knees;" "a mistaken idea," he adds, "which I caught from the Roman Catholic hirelings whom I often heard talk about the merit of bodily suffering." While in this state of mind God in his mysterious providence removed George's father by death. About this time, the Methodists were invited to hold religious services at the Stevenson homestead. Little George was found with other penitent souls seeking Christ in the pardon of sin. In his journal is found the following: "I sought God with prayers and tears. At last deliverance came; upon a Sabbath afternoon, in a meeting held for penitent sinners, God blessed me with a sense of pardoning mercy." George's conversion led to the renewal of his mother's religious life, and also to the conversion of other members of the household. From the day of brother Stevenson's conversion, the old homestead was a stopping place for the preachers of Wesleyan Methodism until the family removed to America. Some time after brother Stevenson's conversion he felt that his spiritual enjoyment was greatly disturbed by reason of conflict with duty. First, he was called upon to unite in the public services of the sanctuary, and furthermore he felt moved of the Spirit to preach the gospel. Resisting the Spirit in these two matters, he was cast into temporary darkness of mind; but when he yielded himself fully to the claims that pressed themselves upon his heart and conscience, he again felt that

The Lord all the day long
Was his joy and his song.

About the time of this transition period in his religious experience he came to America to visit a brother residing in Philadelphia. Here, as well as in his native land, young Stevenson heard the call to preach the gospel still sounding in his ear. At the expiration of a year he returned to Ireland and took charge of affairs on the home place. About this time a great revival of religion broke out in Scotland and swept through Ireland. In the midst of this great revival brother Stevenson was licensed to preach. "He wrought day and night" with the preachers, and soon found himself doing the full work of a Methodist preacher. In 1840 he emigrated with other members of the family to America. They came to Philadelphia, but they finally selected Lycoming county, Pa., as their future home, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Brother Stevenson's official standing was recognized and his license as a local preacher was renewed by the Quarterly Conference of the Lycoming charge. In 1841 he was recommended for admission on trial in the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was appointed as junior preacher on the Clearfield Circuit with that saintly spirit, the Rev. Thomas Hildebrand. In 1842 he was appointed to Warrior's Mark, with Father Stevens. Here, as at Clearfield, the work was blessed with abundant prosperity. In 1843 he was ordained deacon by Bishop Waugh, and sent as junior preacher to Bedford, with Rev. Jonathan Munroe as preacher in charge. In 1844 he traveled with Rev. Peter McAnally on the Alleghany Circuit. On February 20, 1845, brother Stevenson was united in marriage to Miss Teresa G. McLaughlin. At the ensuing Conference he was ordained elder and appointed as preacher in charge of the old Trough Creek Circuit. In 1846 he was appointed to this field again, with the late Rev. David Shoaff as junior preacher. From that day they were as inseparable as Jonathan and David. In 1847-48 brother Stevenson served on the Concord Circuit, with Rev. Alexander McClay. In 1849 he was appointed to Mifflin, where he was greatly afflicted by the death of his wife and one of his children. In 1850 he was appointed to the Williamsburg charge. On November 28 of the same year he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Watts, one of the daughters of the late Rev. James Watts, of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1851-52 he was appointed to Hancock. In 1853-54 he was sent to Berkley Circuit as preacher in charge, with Rev. Hamilton A. Gaver (who afterwards became his brother-in-law) as junior preacher. In 1855 he was appointed to Hampstead, and in 1856-57 to Newport. About this time the Baltimore Conference was divided, and brother Stevenson, according to the boundaries made, fell into that part called the East Baltimore Conference. In 1858-59 he was appointed to Lewistown, Pa.; in 1860, to Green Castle; in 1861, to Gettysburg, where he felt the strain peculiar to those days and times. In 1862-63 he traveled the Frederick Circuit. In 1864, under the strain of circumstances, he asked for a superannuated relation. At this time great excitement prevailed in the Church. Non-slaveholding had been declared a test of membership. Amid the tide of war excitement rose to unwarranted heights. Brother Stevenson felt himself no longer at home in the M. E. Church. He could no longer subscribe to its views upon national and ecclesiastical questions. He felt that in all good conscience he could not remain in the M. E. Church. His sympathy was with the M. E. Church, South. In conflict of mind and soul he withdrew from the M. E. Church, and in 1865 he united with the Maryland Annual Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, and was appointed to the Buckeystown Circuit. The brethren of this sister denomination knew that his position was a tentative one, and that if the way ever opened he would seek affiliation with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In 1866, seeing his way clear to be with the brethren of his choice, he withdrew from the Methodist Protestant connection and united with the Baltimore Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and was appointed to the Bridgewater charge, where he served two years. In 1868 he was appointed to Luray. In 1869-72 he traveled the Winchester Circuit. For two years he was junior preacher with that man of precious memory, the late Rev. William H. Wheelright. The two succeeding years he was preacher in charge, and had for his fellow-laborer the Rev. S. G. Ferguson. In 1873 he was appointed to Frederick Circuit, where he served four years. In 1877 he was granted a superannuated relation, but as long as physical strength would permit he labored in word and doctrine. Brother Stevenson was a man somewhat below medium stature, but was, nevertheless, compactly built, and a man of great physical strength. He had a massive head and a keen black eye that sparkled with the brilliance of Irish wit and humor. He was the soul of generosity, and those who entered his home were met by the warmth of "one given to hospitality." If he had a will of iron and a nerve of steel, at the same time he possessed a nature of almost boundless sympathy. No sacrifice was too great for him to make for a friend, and if he faced a foe, he was open, brave, and dauntless. He was a man of strong convictions, and unbending religious principles. "He was a devout man, full of faith and the Holy Ghost." Through his whole life he was a constant reader. He both knew and loved the doctrines of Methodism. His knowledge of the Scriptures was, in some respects, almost phenomenal. If asked for references bearing upon any phase of religious doctrine, he would immediately marshal passage after passage, and give the chapter and verse where found. As a preacher, he was scriptural, clear, analytic, forcible, practical, and direct. In his palmy days he possessed an imagination of vivid power. He also possessed the power of condensation to a remarkable degree. He retained something of the brogue of his native land, but when brother Stevenson was in health and strength he "preached with power and in demonstration of the Spirit." Many gracious revivals attended his ministry, and in the final day of reckoning many stars will adorn his crown. He never lost interest in the great movements of Methodism. As long as he was able to read, his study table was the home of the leading papers and periodicals of the great family of Methodism. For years Brother Stevenson's health was so precarious that he was unable to attend the sessions of the Annual Conference, but he took a lively interest in all its proceedings and always made affectionate inquiry after his brethren. The last three years of his life were years of great physical weakness and suffering. The greater portion of the time he had to be under the constant care and attention of a nurse. His death was not unexpected to his friends. He was ready and waiting for the messenger. On July 8, 1893, the aged patriarch "gathered up his feet and departed in peace," and within two days his beloved wife followed after. His funeral services were conducted from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Stephens City.

WILLIAM ANDERSON WADE was born in Christiansburg, Va., August 2, 1826, and died in Washington, D. C., December 4, 1893, aged sixty-seven years, four months, and two days. When he was twelve years old he was left an orphan. Three years later he entered Emory and Henry College, where he remained until the age of eighteen, when he entered the mercantile business in his native town. The next thirteen years of his life were spent here and in Baltimore. In 1857 he accepted the position of cashier for the White Sulphur Springs Company of Virginia, and subsequently engaged in the wholesale hardware business with a firm in Richmond, Va. After the civil war began he was chosen to fill an important office in the treasury of the Confederate government, which office he held until 1863, when he was elected cashier of the Farmers' Bank in Blacksburg, Va. After the close of the war the settlement of this bank devolved chiefly upon him. In all these positions, some of them involving heavy responsibilities, he discharged every duty with the strictest fidelity and to the entire satisfaction of all parties concerned. Through all these years of secular toil he felt his conscience impelling him to a higher calling. For twenty years he had been a local preacher, rendering faithful and acceptable service where he lived, and in the country around, as occasion afforded; but he always felt that he was called to the work of the regular ministry, yet there were barriers which always appeared to close up his way. When, therefore, Providence opened the way, he turned aside from several lucrative business openings, and offered himself to the Baltimore Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was received into the traveling connection in March, 1868. This was the consummation of his ardent hope, and the path of duty upon which he now entered rendered him supremely joyful. His first appointment was Salem Circuit, which he served three years. In 1871 he was stationed at Harrisonburg, and in 1872-73 at Charlestown, W. Va. The next year at Moorefield; and in 1875-76 he traveled Montgomery Circuit, Maryland. At the close of his second year on this charge he was appointed to Brucetown, where he remained one year. The next three years he labored on Winchester Circuit, and in 1881 he was stationed at Front Royal, where he remained three years also. From here he was sent to Lexington, which station he served in 1884-85. In 1886-87 he filled Christiansburg Station, and in 1888-89 was appointed to Warrenton. His last charge in the Conference was Falls Church, to which he was assigned in 1890. At the Conference which met in Roanoke in 1891 he was placed on the supernumerary list, and remained on this list until Conference one year ago, when he was granted a superannuated relation. He came into the Conference late in life, yet his ministry extended through twenty-six years, and embraced twelve pastoral charges. After a change of his active relation to the Conference, he accepted a position in the auditor's office of the District of Columbia. His excellent business qualifications and his aptness as an accountant served him well in this office, and secured for him a fair remuneration. He was filling this office when he died. Our deceased brother was a man of deep and solid piety. He professed faith in Christ at the age of twenty-four, and the same night he consecrated his home to God by erecting a family altar. Next to his family came his Church; and whether he served it as class leader, steward, recording steward, local preacher, or pastor, he was in every office faithful, and in everything conscientious. He observed regular habits of private devotion. Early in the morning, when other members of the family would awake, he would be found up, and engaged in the devout study of God's word. Pen marks and marginal notes all through his Bible indicate the care with which he studied it. He was prudent in speech, carefully avoiding the speaking of evil about people, and encouraged the same disposition in others. He was very happy in his domestic life. On August 31, 1847, he was married to Miss Charlotte Louise Amiss, who, with their three children, survive him. The warm, tender love he bestowed upon his household was fully reciprocated, and the careful, watchful training of his children was rewarded in their early conversion and the development of their religious characters. His return home from business or pastoral calls always brought joy and gladness to his family. As a preacher, he was orthodox, systematic, and clear. His sermons were carefully prepared; usually they were written, and a free use of the manuscript was had in the pulpit. Tall and commanding in person, courtly in manners, a strong voice and emphatic delivery, a mind well stored with knowledge, and a heart brave and courageous, yet tender, modest, and shrinking, together with a high sense of honor and deep convictions of the efficacy of Christ, were among his chief characteristics. He was not without seals to his ministry, yet he seemed to be more specially called to "feed the flock" of Christ and edify the Church, and no doubt many will rise up in the day of the Lord and call him blessed. In recognition of his ability as a preacher, the Washington and Lee University, in the year 1885, conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity. But how did he die? Whether he had a premonition of death or not we cannot say, but he seemed to grow weary of life as his last sickness came on. Walking to church with his family the Sunday before he was taken down to his bed, he spoke of the heavy burdens which this life lays upon one, and said: "If I could only provide for your comfort in this world, how gladly would I die!" Two days after this he was seized with fatal illness, and in five days he was dead. During his sickness he often prayed and quoted verses of Scripture and stanzas of familiar hymns. A short time before his death he repeated, "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them;" and again, "Helper of the helpless, help thou me." He asked the hour, and when told that it was five o'clock in the morning, said: "Thank the Lord! the night is nearly gone and the dawn is approaching." Half reclining on his pillow, he looked smilingly toward his daughters standing near his bed, and, bringing his hand suddenly to his heart, exclaimed, "I cannot stand this pain any longer!" and instantly expired. Thus lived and thus died this minister and servant of Jesus Christ.

SAMUEL WILMER HADDAWAY was born at St. Michael's, Talbot county, Md., August 1, 1850; and died in Washington, D. C., October 26, 1893. Converted August 22, 1866, at a camp meeting near Easton, Md., brother Haddaway at once joined the M. E. Church, South, the first one of his family to do so. He soon, however, had the deep pleasure of seeing his father and mother and others of the family come into the same communion, and that largely through his influence. From first to last, in doctrine, principles, and polity, the subject of this memoir was a Methodist. Hence, though but sixteen when converted, he at once became zealous in Church work; and, being a school teacher at this period, his sprightly intelligence made him available for much good service. Successively a class leader, an exhorter, and a local preacher, his way gradually opened to the ministry, in entering which work he seems to have yielded to the call of years. The impression that the active ministry was his life business was ineffaceable, and it bore him toward the itinerancy. By the fourth Quarterly Conference of Trappe Station, in February, 1869, he was duly recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection. The Conference met that year at Trinity, in Baltimore, Bishop Wightman presiding. Brother Haddaway's journal gives an interesting account of this his first visit to an Annual Conference. Preachers were not strangers to him, for at the camp meeting where he was converted were some as effective as any in the Church. His observations concerning the bishop and others at the Conference were thoughtfully and discriminatingly made; and the association there with his brethren seems to have afforded him intense pleasure. At Salem, in 1871, brother Haddaway was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce, and at Baltimore, in 1873, by Bishop Pierce, he was ordained elder. His successive appointments were: Baltimore Circuit, 1869-72; Beltsville, 1872-75; Holland Street, 1875-77; Piedmont, 1877-79; Moorefield, 1879-81; Loudoun Circuit, 1881-83, with J. H. Waugh; Middleburg, 1883-84; Fall's Church, 1884-86; Mt. Vernon, 1886-90; Central, 1890-92; Marvin, 1893. Of the Conference of 1892 he asked a superannuated relation, his health having failed; and though he came back in 1893 to take up again his beloved employ, and was appointed to Marvin, in Washington, yet he was not privileged to work through the year. That the first six years of his ministry should have been spent at two appointments was uncommon, and the favor thus shown a young man gave him a keen sense of his responsibility. His devotedness, so marked a characteristic in him, early and variously showed itself. To this day the people of Baltimore Circuit tell how he commenced holding services in a barn, which was soon overrun by the press of attendants. Out of this, as out of similar enterprises, grew a Church society and structure. On Moorefield Circuit also his zeal led him to work with his own hands upon the church building, helping it forward to a speedy completion in every possible way. Brother Haddaway's remarkable devotion to every work he undertook was due to his decision of character. He was a man of intense convictions, deep sympathies, and fervent spirituality. He knew what he wished to achieve, his aims were comprehensive, and they were followed with his whole heart; while sustaining every effort he made was a courage undaunted by the severest obstacles. This easily made him a power in his work. He was the leader of his people, young men notably following his counsel, and often making him their model. Though he neglected no interest of a charge, yet special features of Church work engaged his concern. Foreign missions enlisted his most earnest endeavor. He lectured on their operations in various countries, and made urgent personal appeals for their support, usually securing contributions beyond assessments. Nor was he behind in care for home mission work. He enlarged the borders of any vineyard he was sent to cultivate. His plans in organizing were practical, and his methods carefully adopted. He was both progressive and aggressive. Many features of the modern institutional Church appeared in his enterprises, especially in stations, while such was his unflinching spirituality that the religious character of those under his care was his chief concern. Revivals and growth in grace were insisted upon by him with a persistence that gave him marked success as a pastor. According to years, our deceased brother was cut off in the prime of life; but his course was full and well rounded. Twenty-five years a preacher, earnest, energetic, and unctuous, the sheaves of his ministry were abundant; and eighteen years the head of a happy home, his domestic life was to him a continuous and unalloyed blessing. In February, 1875, brother Haddaway was married to Miss Mollie E. Thompson, daughter of Dr. R. H. Thompson, of Carroll county, Md. For the sake of his tenderly beloved wife and daughter, as well as for his work's sake, he wanted to live, his abounding vitality resisting to the last encroachments of disease. And while he could have smiled at death as at a foe disarmed, he hated not to lay down the weapons of a successful warfare, even for the rest of an endless peace. In the winter of his superannuation he was not content to be idle. The pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church in Oxford wrote of him to the press: "Side by side we stood in loving and sympathetic coöperation, and preached the gospel and called sinners to repentance. In the pentecostal revival of last winter brother Haddaway was present whenever his health would permit, and did grand work. His stirring, thrilling appeals I shall never forget." We who have seen him in the midst of revival work can appreciate every word of this fraternal acknowledgment. He was never happier than when instrumental in saving souls. It seemed a provision of a tender leading in his life that the little vine of his own planting should become the grateful shade to his failing strength. In March last brother Haddaway went to Marvin. That loving people welcomed him, shielded him from overexertion, encouraged him under the gathering shadow of fatal disease, and gently ministered to him to the end. In August he assumed the duties of the chaplaincy of the House of Representatives. Here, too, his individuality was as manifest as in the pastorate. His prayers were pointed and terse, void of affectation, and noticeably fervent. His ministrations made an impression, giving him influence among all attending upon such services. He won their sincere regard, and they mourn his untimely death. His last illness was brief, though he had suffered for years. He went to bed on Sunday, and on Thursday next, his spirit gently passing away, his body was laid in Marvin Church, to be watched over by the young men, whom he had formed into a society. On Friday sorrowing friends, ministerial brethren, and a committee of respect from the House of Representatives met to pay a parting tribute to his memory. He was buried at Freedom, Carroll county, Md. Ministerial friends who were with him in his last days speak of his unflinching faith and firm peace. He said that all was well, and no one who knew him can doubt it.

CHARLES M. BROWN, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Front Royal, Va., was drowned June 7, 1893, in the Shenandoah river, near Harper's Ferry. Such was the startling announcement of the death of one of the most faithful and beloved members of the Baltimore Conference. Many were shocked and saddened by these awful tidings. Only a few weeks before, brother Brown had been appointed for the third year to Front Royal, Va., and had entered upon his work with his accustomed zeal and energy, hoping to make it the best year of his ministry. But in the short space of two months his earthly ministry had ended. On June 9, 1893, a large concourse of sorrowing and bereaved friends attended his funeral in the church in Front Royal of which he had been pastor. The community was in mourning over the death of one so useful and good and true, and reverently followed his remains to their quiet resting place in the beautiful cemetery overlooking the scene of his late home and last ministry. Charles Melville Brown was born in Greeneville, Tenn., November 28, 1851; and died in his forty-second year. His parents were Joseph R. and Fannie J. Brown, both stanch members of the Presbyterian Church. His education was begun at home under a private tutor, Mr. Robert McCorkle, and was finished with a five years' course at Emory and Henry College, Va., from which he graduated and took his degree of A.B. In 1867, in the sixteenth year of his age, he was converted and joined the Presbyterian Church under the ministry of Rev. Nathan Bachman. While a student at Emory and Henry College, having decided to enter the Christian ministry, and convinced that he could not conscientiously accept and preach all the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, he connected himself with the M. E. Church, South, with which he found himself in accord. Intimate association from his childhood with his grandmother, who was a pioneer Methodist, and for whom he had great love and admiration, is believed to have contributed largely to this decision. In 1873 he was licensed to preach, and subsequently admitted on trial into the Holston Conference, from which he was transferred to the Baltimore Conference at its session in Washington in March, 1875. His first appointment was as junior preacher on Rockville Circuit, with that true friend and kind counselor of young preachers, Rev. J. C. Dice. His ministry here was successful and greatly blessed. So prudent and useful did he prove himself as a minister that at the close of his third year he was appointed, in 1878, to White Sulphur Springs, a difficult and important charge. Here he remained two years, and was in high favor with the church and the many visitors who frequented this celebrated resort. In 1880 he was appointed to Reisterstown, Md., where he remained four years, displaying unusual talent for organizing, and exerting a wide influence among the people. His work in this charge was preëminently successful. His power and usefulness as a minister took more definite form, and gave sure prophecy of his subsequent career. He was abundant in labors, and full of resources. The Church at Reisterstown feels still the force of his life and ministry, and no name is more precious than that of Charles M. Brown. While stationed here he married Mrs. Lida Phinney, a devout and active member of his congregation, and an earnest Christian worker, who, with their five children, survives to lament his death. His superior capacity in organizing, his zeal in evangelistic labors, his varied talents for work among the young, and his unsurpassed pastoral fidelity, designated him for broader fields of usefulness; and at the close of his fourth year at Reisterstown, in 1884, he was appointed to Central Church, Baltimore. The extent of his labors in all directions and spheres of ministerial activity resulted in large blessings to the Church, and gave promise of even more abundant fruit. But the constant strain of such labors upon his never robust constitution proved too severe, and at the close of his second year he was removed and appointed to Middleburg, Loudoun county, Va. Here his physical vigor promptly returned, and soon the whole work felt the force and stimulus of his spirit and activity, and began an upward movement. He was not content with "the metes and bounds" of his work, but pushed out and opened up new preaching places in schoolhouses and in the woods. Churches were repaired, congregations enlarged, Sunday schools reorganized, families visited, and souls converted. After four years of marked success he was appointed, in 1890, to Freedom Circuit, Maryland, where he remained but one year. While successful and beloved here, as elsewhere, his talents for certain kinds of work had been so clearly indicated that, in 1891, he was appointed to Front Royal, Va. The Church and community immediately felt the influence of his presence and ministry. There was a gracious revival of religion and many accessions to the Church, both in Front Royal and in the country around. New openings were discovered and entered, the Sunday school took on new life, the young people were marshaled in active service, and the older members were invigorated with the impulses of a higher life. His influence and zeal were strongly felt among the students at the academy. At the time of his death he was planning and working for greater results in this direction; but his "sun went down when it was yet day," and his labors ended in the very zenith of his ministry and usefulness. Brother Brown was one of the most popular and beloved ministers of our Conference. He was genial and approachable, gentle and courteous, yet firm and dignified. He was unselfish, self-sacrificing, and generous. He was a true friend, one to be trusted and loved. Withal he was a man of deep and fervent piety. He loved the word of God and studied it closely. He had great joy in the conversion of sinners, and earnestly labored to build up believers. He was an evangelist in the true scriptural sense, and exulted in a revival of religion. His preaching was practical and illustrative, often embodying the doctrinal element. His style was simple, clear, earnest, and effective. He always held himself under control. He was kind, charitable, and pure in speech. He was rather above medium height, erect in form, and vigorous in movement. While his features spoke of a kind heart, they also indicated strength and decision of character. In a large measure he possessed the spirit of enterprise and adventure. If we might discriminate, without any depreciation of his talents and usefulness in other departments, we would say that his special sphere of usefulness, by his own choice and rare adaptation, was among the young. He loved young men. Before our Church provided for the organization of Epworth Leagues, brother Brown had in his work young people's societies and leagues. He held Sunday-school institutes, was a member of the Sunday-school Board of the Conference continuously from the first year of its organization, and in every way sought to promote the spiritual welfare of the young. He had a genius for this work. But in the gentle courtesies, the pure atmosphere, the unrestrained freedom and delight of his home, he was perhaps best known. He ordered his household with gentle, but firm discipline. He made companions of his children, himself becoming a little child, and gave most careful attention to their religious interests. His aged mother writes: "His home life was as near perfect as mortals ever attain to—a dutiful and loving son, full of the Spirit from his boyhood on through his short life." We append a brief quotation from the remarks of Rev. Samuel Rodgers, who conducted his funeral services, assisted by Revs. David Bush, B. W. Bond, H. P. Hamill, H. W. Kinzer, W. H. D. Harper, and others: "He had the observant eye, the guarded tongue, the ready hand, and the swift feet when duty beckoned. His work was wrought after careful survey and according to a well-considered plan. He sought the lost and brought them to the Great Shepherd. And what a care he had for the lambs! Was anyone among us more solicitous for the welfare of the children? Did anyone among us equal him in teaching the little folks? And what a cheery, bright Christian experience was his! He walked in the light of the Lord. He was large-hearted, gave liberally and freely, was given to hospitality, a lover of good men, and in all relations he was the Christian gentleman. May we not say, an Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile? He served his generation according to the will of God, and fell on sleep."

WILLIAM W. HEDRICK was born June 15, 1827, in Wythe county, Va.; and died in Newport, Giles county, Va., October 10, 1893. The accident by which he lost his life was likely a fall from his vehicle, on the morning of October 7, in passing over the mountains from Blacksburg to Newport. This caused concussion of the brain in addition to other serious internal injuries. He never rallied sufficiently to give an account of the sad circumstance, but continued to sink until Tuesday following, when, at 10 A. M., his spirit gently passed away. His parents, Jacob and Susanna Hedrick, were godly people; and, consequently, in youth he developed that characteristic principle that was destined to be the controlling feature of his life. As a marked evidence of this he carefully made his associates of those who were deeply pious, although greatly his seniors. He long sought a knowledge of his sins forgiven, allowing nothing to discourage him. With these influences at work, he united with the Church in 1844, or two years before he was converted. This blessed season, about which there were never any doubts in his mind, occurred in 1846. He at once became the intimate friend and companion of his class leader, and was looked upon by all who knew him as a model young Christian. He was married to Miss Evelyn Wisely, daughter of Michael and Barbara Wisely, in Wythe county, Va., November 10, 1849. She still survives him, with nine of their twelve children. He was licensed to exhort at the old Cripple Creek camp ground, in the county of his nativity, in 1853; licensed to preach on June 9, 1855, by the Quarterly Conference of the Wytheville Circuit, Rev. J. M. McTeer preacher in charge. He served twenty years as a local preacher, conscientiously performing his duty in this respect, so far as health and opportunity permitted. On October 30, 1859, he was ordained deacon, and on October 11, 1863, he was ordained elder, being inducted into both of these offices by the sainted Bishop Early. He joined the Baltimore Conference on probation in March, 1875, and was admitted into full connection in March, 1878. He was preacher in charge of Upper Botetourt one year; James River, three years; Lafayette, three years; New Castle, two years; Catawba, two years; Cave Spring, three years; Catawba, four years; and was appointed to Newport Circuit at our last Conference session, which he served up to the time of his death. From his first sermon, preached on June 24, 1855, up to the last, preached on October 1, 1893, he had delivered 3,075 sermons. He fell at the post of duty. As a man he was respected and esteemed by those who knew him. Being very reserved in manner, and by no means aggressive in character, he suffered in the estimation of the casual acquaintance; but upon a more intimate association he invariably assumed his proper place, and was best loved by those who knew him best. He loved peace, and pursued it. In fact, so great was his love for peace that at times to his detriment and suffering did he purchase it. Few are aware of the severity of the personal trials through which he was called to pass. Conscious of the necessity of his own personal experience being clear, and so sternly devoted to the principle he had adopted in youth as his, amidst much that would have wrecked a weaker character, he stood true and steadfast unto the end. As a preacher of the word he was plain and practical, clear and forcible, impelled by a deep conviction of the truths he would expound. Although usually an even preacher, at times he would arise above his ordinary efforts and tower aloft in logic and eloquence. Particularly was this so in camp meetings or revival services. The atonement with him was a theme in which he had his chiefest delight; warming with the advancement of his subject, he would become thoroughly aroused, and, mounting to his grandest heights, appear indeed the inspired messenger of a new covenant. On the subject of baptism he was thoroughly at home, whilst he was considered an extremist on temperance. On all moral questions his position was ever positive, being seriously honest in his convictions. He was ever chaste in his conversation, eschewing the appearance of evil, and was too serious to enjoy an anecdote. He was particularly appreciated in the family circle as he would enter the homes of his people. However, of all in the home, the children loved him best. Their hearty greeting was warmly met and sincerely enjoyed by him. He was uniformly beloved by the people he was privileged to serve. In the words of his presiding elder, Dr. P. H. Whisner, "he was an able expounder of the word of God, a workman that needed not to be ashamed. He was a man of spotless character, without fear and without reproach, and faithful in all the work of a Methodist preacher." His body was laid to rest October 11, in a cemetery at his home church in Wythe, to await the morning of the resurrection.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except those of Charles M. Bragg, who was expelled, and V. W. Wheeler, who had withdrawn.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? J. R. McClure, U. B. Phillips. 2.

JAMES R. MCCLURE was born in Greeneville, Tenn., in the year 1818. In 1842 he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in 1844 was licensed to preach. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Andrew, in 1846, and elder by Bishop Paine, in 1848. He came to Colorado in 1873, being transferred to the Western Conference. For ten years he did efficient work as a traveling preacher. At the time of his death he had been a superannuate for about ten years; making in all a little over twenty years in connection with the work in Colorado. Up to almost the last day of his life brother McClure was actively engaged, carrying out conscientiously and with Christian cheerfulness the "trivial task, the daily round" of life. He was to the end a faithful and reliable worker in connection with Morrison Memorial Church, taking an interest in every department of Church work, and never absenting himself from any of the means of grace. He was a man of whom the local Church felt justly proud, not merely for his work's sake, but also because as a Christian gentleman he was highly respected by the entire community. At the age of seventy-six, after only two days of sickness, he ended his labors, passing away in great peace.

U. B. PHILLIPS came to us last year from Texas, in which state he had labored as a Methodist minister for twenty-five years. His certificates and recommendations proved that in the Conference from which he came he was a brother beloved, and that "his praise was in all the churches." He took charge of the Durango Station, in this Conference, early in October of last year, and for a few weeks, though in great affliction, he did faithful and earnest work, that won the affection of his people; work that will not be forgotten in the great day of accounts. The hoped-for improvement in health was never realized. Indeed, he grew worse and worse until the end of November, when, at the comparatively early age of fifty-six, he entered into eternal rest and eternal joy. Shortly before he died he bore this testimony: "And not a wave of trouble rolls across my peaceful breast."

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? J. C. Woolam. 1.

JOHN C. WOOLAM was born January 15, 1813, in Edgelyield District, South Carolina. While a small boy his parents moved to Giles county, Tenn., and at that place he grew to manhood. He was converted under the ministry of Joshua Butcher, and received into the M. E. Church October 19, 1831. In 1832 he was appointed class leader by J. B. McFerrin. This was the beginning of his official work in the Church, a work that ended only in his death. He loved God and the Church, but he loved his country also. In 1836 he enlisted in Jones's company, Armstrong's regiment, and served his country in a campaign against the Indians in Florida. He came to Texas in 1838, and served in several campaigns against the Indians in 1838 and 1839. He was one of the charter members of the first church in Houston, organized by Rev. Jesse Hord in 1838. It was at this place and at this time that he realized that he was called to preach the unsearchable riches of the gospel of our blessed Lord. It may be that the moral state of the community stirred the heart of this good man, and the Spirit within cried, "Who shall bring salvation to these dying souls?" and God said, "Go thou and tell them of Jesus and his love." After much prayer and self-examination he gave himself for all time to this great work, in which he continued for fifty-four years—think of it—telling the same story, and never tiring of the story nor of the work! The old, old story, sweeter as it grows, more delightful as you learn more of it! No wonder the cry, "Tell me more about Jesus!" and the heart of the minister responds, "I would cry so loud that all the world might hear!" While an exhorter he served the Montgomery Mission as junior preacher. He was licensed to preach June 13, 1840, by the Montgomery Quarterly Conference. The remainder of the year 1840 he served as junior preacher with Samuel A. Williams on the Nacogdoches Mission. He was returned to the Montgomery Mission to assist Robert Crawford in that work. In 1841 he was employed by Littleton Fowler, the presiding elder, to serve the Liberty Mission. It extended from the Sabine to the San Jacinto rivers. He found only three members of the church when he entered this work, and at the end of the year he had ninety-seven. He took no work for the year 1842, but devoted himself to books, that he might be the better prepared for his great work. At the Conference of 1842 he was admitted on trial, and was sent to Lamar Mission. Here he remained only four months, and was sent to Soda Lake Mission by the presiding elder. In 1844 he served Marshall Circuit with Rev. William Craig. January 12, 1845, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Janes, and was appointed to Nacogdoches Circuit. In 1846 he served the San Augustine Circuit. He was ordained elder in 1847 by Bishop Paine, and served the Crockett Circuit. In 1848 he was appointed to the San Augustine Circuit; in 1849, to the San Augustine African Mission; in 1850, to the Marshall Circuit; in 1851, to the Palestine Circuit; in 1852, returned to the Nacogdoches Circuit. This year he was united in marriage to the widow of Littleton Fowler. In 1853-54 he was appointed to the Jasper Circuit; in 1855, agent for Fowler Institute; in 1856, San Augustine Circuit; in 1857, Douglas Circuit; in 1858, Elysian Fields Circuit, and returned to same in 1859; in 1860-61, Gilmer Station; in 1862-63, chaplain in the army of the Confederacy; in 1864-65, Hemphill Circuit; in 1866, San Augustine Circuit; in 1867, Livingston Circuit; in 1868-70, Crockett District; in 1871-73, Crockett and Pennington Circuit; in 1874, Sunday-school agent; in 1875, Pennington Circuit; in 1876, Elysian Fields Circuit; in 1877, Harrison Circuit; in 1878, Elysian Fields Circuit; in 1879-81, Palestine Circuit; in 1882, Athens Circuit; from 1883 to 1890, chaplain of the state prison at Rusk, Tex. These last seven years of conscientious labor brought our venerable father and brother to that period in his eventful life—the most trying of all periods. Now he must put off, to a great degree, his war harness that he has worn so long. His brethren go forward to the battle, but he must remain behind. No wonder his heart filled with emotion and his eyes with tears when he realized that his work was done. No man ever loved the Church more than John C. Woolam; few, if any, were ever loved more by the people, his own Conference, and the Church, than our departed father in Jesus. His name was known in nearly every home in East Texas. The families honored him by naming their children for him, having him to baptize them, and sending for him to marry their young people, and bury their dead and preach their funerals. The Conference honored him by many expressions of love and trust, and the state honored him by calling upon him to lead the devotions of her people on many important occasions; but better than all these, God honored him by blessing his labors with many happy conversions and the building up of the Church wherever he was sent. Brother Woolam was a peacemaker. He never created strife; but when he found bickerings in the Church, brethren at outs, he never failed to reconcile them. "Blessed are the peacemakers!" Another point in his ministerial character: he was watchful over the burying grounds of our dead. He would gather the people together, and make these gatherings a great blessing religiously to the Church. They would clean off the grounds, and fence them securely, and then sing and pray and talk of heaven. Our Heavenly Father looks ahead of his servants, and prepares a place for them to die. When our dear brother had finished his labors, how beautiful to retire to the Christian and affectionate home of his step-son, Rev. L. M. Fowler, and rest and wait for the Master's call to come home! His decline was gradual, but his bodily sufferings great—confined mostly to his room, and for a long while to his bed. His mind was clear, his spirit sweet, his faith in God strong, and his hope of immortality glorious. He had, in his long affliction, all the attention that intelligent heads, loving hearts, and willing hands could give. Brother Fowler, his wife, sweet girls, and son Gilbert, were angels of mercy to watch and care for him as a mother attends an infant child. When the end drew near, he sent his love to his brethren of the East Texas Conference, and added, in the language of Dr. J. B. McFerrin: "They will know where to find me. You know what that means." As the end came nearer still, there were no clouds, no dark valleys, nothing to make afraid. When asked by sister Fowler, "How is it now, grandpa?" his answer came slowly, deliberately, "All beautiful, glorious, divine!" These were the last words that fell from his lips on earth. What must he have said when his eyes opened to the light of the New Jerusalem—the city of the living God? What must he have said when he met Williams, Willson, Bellamy, Bridges, Menifee, and a host of others, and his sainted wife, who had gone before? If it was "all beautiful, glorious, divine," while leaning on the arms of his Saviour while passing over the river of death, what did he say when his eyes beheld the King Immortal in all his glory? "The half had never been told." So, on January 18, 1894, he fell asleep in the arms of Jesus.

SAMUEL WOODBERRY, son of Rev. Collins Woodberry, was born in Marion District, South Carolina, November 13, 1813; and died in Quincy, Fla., October 20, 1894, in the eighty-first year of his life. He was baptized in infancy, in South Carolina, by Rev. Daniel Asbury. He came to Florida with his parents in 1825, when twelve years of age, and lived in Gadsden county for several years. Brother Woodberry was converted in his nineteenth year, at old Mt. Pleasant camp meeting, in 1832, and soon afterwards joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. Having put his hand to the plow, he never looked back. On September 23, 1843, at the fourth quarterly meeting for Gadsden Circuit, he was licensed to preach. Rev. Thos. E. Benning was pre-iding elder. He was received on trial in the Florida Conference in 1847, ordained deacon by Bishop William Capers in 1849, and elder by Bishop Robert Paine in 1851. Brother Woodberry was twice married; first to Miss P. A. Williams, of Wilmington, N. C., who died at Attapulgus, Ga., August 30, 1848. He married Mrs. Matilda Smith, of Tallahassee, Fla., in 1849. He had several children. His eldest son of his second marriage, Rev. Edwin Woodberry, was a young man of rare promise. He died about fifteen years ago while serving St. Matthew's Church, Jacksonville, his first and only charge. Brother Woodberry was a preacher of the glorious gospel of Christ for fifty-one years, and a member of the Florida Conference forty-seven years. For forty-seven years he never failed to answer to roll call at the convening of his Conference. He served missions, circuits, stations, and districts. He went like a true itinerant wherever sent, cheerfully, gladly. These were a few of the many charges he served during his long and honorable connection with our Conference: Tallahassee Station, Palatka, Quincy, Citra, Tallahassee District, two terms of four years each. His last appointment was Live Oak Station, in 1887.

Soon after Conference he had a severe stroke of paralysis, and had to give up his work. He partially recovered from this, and traveled from place to place, visiting friends and preaching as he was able. He asked for and received a superannuated relation in January, 1888. Brother Woodberry was an excellent and successful preacher. He gloried in the cross of Christ, and led many souls to the Saviour. He was greatly loved and honored by his brethren. He was a member of two or three General Conferences—the one which met in New Orleans in 1866, and perhaps others. He was a true friend to young preachers. He dearly loved his brethren of the ministry, and especially the members of the Florida Conference, and was loved by them. God blessed him and made him a blessing. He was faithful to God and his vows as a Methodist preacher. The last few weeks of his stay on earth his strength rapidly failed. He said he suffered no pain, but feared that his paralysis was returning. Two weeks before his death he attended church and assisted in the communion service. His words were full of tenderness, warning, and comfort. In his last illness he referred to the semi-centennial service to be held in Jacksonville, and that he had been invited to take part. He said, "Tell brother Fulwood I will not be there," and added: "If there is anything I love on earth, it is the Florida Conference, but I will not attend another session. I will attend the conference above." Pointing toward heaven, he said: "I will be in that conference long before the Florida Conference convenes." Florida is indebted more than tongue can tell to such men as our translated brother. "One soweth and another reapeth." We have entered into the rich fruitage of their sowing. May we all rejoice together in the harvest of the "sweet by and by!" He died in peace, and rests from his labors.

WILLIAM R. JOHNSON died at Jacksonville, Fla., in January, 1894. For years he had endured physical and mental suffering, and had nothing to look forward to but death as a release from pain. He was transferred to this Conference from the Kentucky Conference, in 1872. He was in feeble health, and yet was able to do effective work until January, 1889, when, at the Conference session at Bartow, he took a superannuated relation. He served the following works: Madison, Apalachicola, Fernandina, Key West, Shark's Chapel, Hamilton Circuit, Lake Butler Circuit, Orange Springs Circuit, Cedar Key Mission, St. Mary's Mission, Nassau Mission, and Duval Mission. He married in 1873, while stationed at Apalachicola. His wife passed away some years ago, leaving several orphan children, who are now in the Orphan's Home of the South Georgia Conference. Brother Johnson did his duty faithfully and well. As intimated before, he suffered more or less at all times from an incurable disease. None but those who knew him intimately were aware what hours of agony were his, but "he endured as seeing Him who is invisible." His last years were spent in a struggle for existence, but he found friends in Tallahassee and Jacksonville, in which cities he made his home at different times, and his brethren in the Conference cheerfully aided him when called upon. His mental faculties failed him, so that for a time it was thought best to place him in the asylum at Chattahoochee. He died, and gladly exchanged earth for heaven.

ROBERT STORK was born at Columbia, S. C., October 10, 1850; and entered into rest at Asheville, Fla., in April, 1894. He was reared under Christian influences, in connection with the Baptist Church of which his parents were members. At the age of twenty-five, while listening to a sermon at the Methodist Church by Rev. Jesse Clinton, of the South Carolina Conference, he became awakened to his spiritual condition, and soon afterwards was converted to God. This fact led him to feel that this people, to whom he was so greatly indebted, should be his people, and their God his God. Subsequently he was received as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The same year, 1875, he was granted a local preacher's license, and began to labor, under the direction of his pastor, in the waste places of Zion and in Sunday school. His zeal, humility, earnestness, and devout spirit won the loving confidence of the people among whom he labored. About 1878 brother Stork removed from his native state to Arkansas, and soon afterwards joined the Conference, and for two years labored faithfully and with marked success. His health broke down, and he retired to the local ranks. He returned to his home in South Carolina, where, as health and strength would permit, he found useful and profitable employment—the Sunday school and missionary work being his special care. The Woman's Missionary Society at Greenbrier Church, S. C., conferred upon him a life membership, in appreciation of his services to their society. In 1880 he came to reside in Florida, and his health was so far recovered that in 1883 he again joined the itinerant ranks, and for six years he did faithful service as preacher and pastor. He was studious, painstaking, and attended well to all the interests of the Church. At the Conference of 1889 he was compelled by the condition of his health to seek a superannuated relation. For five long years he suffered the most terrible torture of body, which rendered him entirely helpless and dependent. In affliction and poverty he patiently endured, without murmur or complaint. Amidst his great suffering he was wont to say: "It is the Father's good pleasure. I must humbly submit and wait his will." His confidence in God never faltered. He would say, like Job, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." While in the shade of retirement, his interest in the Church and love for the brethren were unabated. His affliction deprived him of the public means of grace, but in his home, or when carried to a service, he was ever ready to testify to the power of saving grace and the sustaining power of God under the most trying circumstances. Although helpless, and seldom free from pain, he was always cheerful and happy. "Rejoicing in tribulations also." The end came suddenly, but found him ready. Without a lingering groan, he fell asleep in Jesus, in sure and certain hope of immortality and eternal life—in the forty-fourth year of his age, and the nineteenth year of his ministry.

GRINSFIELD TAYLOR was born in Blount county, Tenn., July 2, 1823; and suddenly departed this life in Jacksonville, Fla., January 9, 1895. In his youth he enjoyed superior educational advantages, and graduated from Tusculum College, Green county, which institution was under the supervision of the Holston Conference. The first year after graduating he was elected to a professorship in Hiwassee College, Monroe county, and this position he filled with credit to himself and satisfaction to all concerned. In his early manhood he consecrated his life to the service of God, soon heard the call to preach the gospel, and joined the Holston Conference, which then embraced the whole of East Tennessee, West North Carolina, and a portion of Virginia. He had intended to become a lawyer, but his religious convictions led him to devote himself to the more sacred calling of the Christian ministry. As an itinerant minister he very soon pushed his way to the front rank among the ablest members of the Holston Conference, and filled most of the important stations of that Conference. He was stationed successively at Chattanooga, Knoxville, Cleveland, Morristown, Bristol, and Asheville, and served several years as presiding elder of more than one district. He always worked in the lead, and his counsel on all Church matters was universally sought and valued; and his forty years of successful ministerial work is evidence of his thorough consecration to Christian duty. He was happily married in 1871 to Miss Lizzie Fleming, who survives him in deepest sorrow. Four children were born of this Christian marriage, all of whom are living. They possess the richest legacy that can fall to children—the influences and blessings of a Christian father's life. His excellences and virtues were best known and most highly appreciated by those to whom he sustained the endearing relations of husband and father. Some twelve years ago brother Taylor, through exposure and overexertion in his work, was afflicted by severe bronchial trouble, which necessitated his discontinuance from active work, and he requested the relation of a supernumerary. Eight years ago he felt that his health demanded his removal to Florida, and he was transferred to the Florida Conference, continuing his supernumerary relation and preaching as occasion served until he was called up higher. To his excellent traits of character as a gentleman and as a Christian it would be impossible to pay too high a tribute. He was everybody's friend, especially so to the poor and needy, who never appealed to him in vain for assistance. His acts of secret charity were many and munificent, and his noble impulses and sterling character constantly grew in the estimation of his friends. The crowning beauty of his life consisted in his quiet, unostentatious manner, that will forever embalm him in the memory of his friends and acquaintances. He was a prudent, decided man, never rash, never hasty, yet earnest, zealous, active in Church work, and of charming Christian spirit. During the past year he preached very often, and the people were delighted and profited by his ministry. He rendered valuable assistance every year to the pastor of our Church in Orlando, where he lived and was highly esteemed. He went up to the Annual Conference to meet his brethren, but was suddenly summoned to a greater conference, to unite with those who had preceded him to the home above. "He was not, for God took him."

J. EDWARD NEAL was born and spent his early years in Middle Georgia. His family home was supplied with everything that a very large and very rich plantation could produce, with everything that money could buy in the cities, with everything that culture and good breeding could give. But few even of his brethren who saw him, forgetful of self, hurrying from toil to toil, from difficulty to difficulty, enduring all manner of hardships, "in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness"—testifying that Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man—but few knew how much he was like the Lord who "though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich." In our brother Neal the word of God had free course and was glorified. Perfect love cast all fear out of his heart. The Holy Ghost sent down from heaven often made his preaching a baptism of fire. He was ready unto every good work, instant in season and out of season, fervent and exultant in spirit, impatient if he was not always hearing conscience-stirred sinners weeping and crying, "I'm lost, I'm lost!" or newborn souls in miracles of joy singing, "I'm saved, I'm saved; glory to God!" It is not strange that wherever he went so many recognized brother Neal as a teacher come from God, and learned of him how to be saved. It is not strange that in those places favored with his self-denying, Christ-exalting ministry his name should be as precious ointment poured forth. It is not strange that among his brethren of the Conference there are so many who witness to the sanctifying, inspiring, stimulating influences of his walk and conversation. It is not strange that he being dead yet speaketh. It is not strange that we who remember him and his life and its fruits should resolve to follow on after him even as he followed Christ. He died December 23, 1894, at Pleasant Grove, on Alafia Circuit, Hillsboro county, Fla.

Haynes, F. D. Crumley, W. H. Kelly, W. G. E. Cunyngnam, R. M. Hickey, W. P. Doane, J. M. Romans, J. W. Robertson. 19.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Rufus W. Kite, Emory B. Robertson, George W. K. Green, John R. Bellamy. 4.

RUFUS WALTER KITE was born near Rogersville, Hawkins county, Tenn., July 27, 1858. He was the son of Hickman A. and Elizabeth (Peck) Kite, the worthy sire and mother of a noble son. He "knew the Scriptures from a child," and had in his own home an exemplification of their truth and beauty. Brother Kite joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1873. About the same time he was converted; though there is no record of the date of that important event, the place is certain. It was Dotson's Creek Chapel, about a mile from his father's residence; and he has been heard to say that when he found "the pearl of great price," he ran all the way from the chapel to his home to tell the glad tidings to those who loved him best. He was licensed to preach in 1878, when he was just twenty years old, and from the beginning made "full proof of his ministry." He was ordained a local deacon at Asheville, N. C., in 1882, by Bishop Wilson. In 1884 he joined the Holston Conference, at Bristol; and it is remarkable that he entered the itinerant field at the same place where he "fell on his shield." He was made a traveling deacon, and received into full connection, at Knoxville, in 1886, under the presidency of Bishop McTyeire. In 1889, at Morristown, he was ordained elder by Bishop Wilson. The following charges had the services of this zealous and successful pastor: Mossy Creek, Tenn., 1884-86; Newport Circuit, Tenn., 1886-90; Graham Station, Va., 1890-91; Cleveland Station, Tenn., 1891-92. In this last station his health failed, and brother

Frank Y. Jackson assisted him for several months. In October, 1892, he took a superannuated relation, and remained in that relation till his death at Bristol, March 22, 1894. His brethren will not soon forget his talk at Wytheville, when he told them how hard it was for him to rest on his oars, and how he longed to be actively engaged in calling sinners to repentance. The labors of brother Kite were greatly blessed in all the charges he served. He had remarkable revivals everywhere; and there were large accessions to the Church to which he was so fully consecrated. Under his pastoral leadership and inspiration two good churches were built, one at Mossy Creek and the other at Graham. He was also the promoter of the erection of a good parsonage at Newport. As a preacher he was much above the average. He had fine analytical powers, was clear, forcible, and logical in statement, and had great zeal. He was also a fine exhorter. But there was a power in his preaching that all his logic, his voice—a rich orotund—and his hortatory brilliancy do not account for. It was the power which he got on his knees in secret prayer. His face often beamed, his lip quivered, his eye melted, as he sternly rebuked sin and tenderly wooed the sinner. God found in him an open and holy channel through which he displayed his mighty power and all-embracing compassion. Truly, he was a "man of God." And the end of that man was peace. Although he was almost an entire stranger in Bristol, the community was stirred with anxious interest in him during the last weeks; and nothing was omitted that could be done for his comfort and that of his family. On the day before he died, brother French, two or three other ministerial brethren, his immediate family, his father and one brother, and a few neighbors tiptoed into his room to partake with the dying consumptive, for the last time, of the emblems of our Lord's death and passion. During the communion he was very quiet, softly praying. Then, in a feeble voice, he exhorted us to "preach the beautiful, tender gospel of Jesus Christ," and to give ourselves to his service. "O," he cried, "I always loved it! I was never so happy as when I was preaching it. But I can't help wishing I could preach it once more, and tell what I know now." And then—well, he said so many tender, precious things. But sweeter far than all he said was the radiance that crowned his brow and wreathed his face "in a smile of white."

EMORY B. ROBERTSON was born in Habersham county, Ga., August 15, 1855; and died in Johnson City, Tenn., May 8, 1894. He was converted to God in his thirteenth year. He was licensed to preach by J. H. Keith, at Chatata, Tenn., in 1878, T. R. Handy being his pastor. The same year in which he was licensed to preach, 1878, he was admitted on trial into the Holston Conference, at Knoxville; ordained deacon by Bishop McTyeire, in 1880, at Morristown; ordained elder by Bishop Wilson, in 1882, at Asheville. He served the following charges: Trenton Circuit, 1878, a junior under W. H. Dawn; Ooltewah Circuit, 1879-80; Hendersonville Station, 1881; Johnson City Station, 1882; Bakersville Station, 1883-84; Rheatown Circuit, 1885. On Rheatown charge his health gave way, and at the next session of the Conference he was superannuated, which relation he held till 1887, when he was made effective and sent again to Johnson City Station, in 1887-88. His health giving way the second time, he was again superannuated till October, 1892, when he was made effective and sent to Jonesboro Station. After a few months' service at Jonesboro, his health failed him again; and last October he was for the third time superannuated, which relation he held till May 8, 1894, when God made him effective forever, transferred him to the conference above, and stationed him in the city of the redeemed. In 1883 he was married to Georgia Bell, daughter of Capt. Bell, of Dalton, Ga. Those who knew him in his active ministry say that he was a man of varied power—one of the best of pastors, able in prayer, a good preacher, so far as head and heart are concerned, and could have filled any pastoral charge in the Conference. Three weeks before he died, one said to him, "Have you any fears?" "Little afraid of my mind, so much suffering has made it shaky; if it is God's will, I would like to be clear when the end comes." God willed it otherwise. Ten days before he died he went into a semi-conscious or delirious state. It is said that one in this condition exhibits every trait of character, good and bad. If this be true, brother Robertson's character was as pure as an angel's. He reviewed his own life, men and measures, but the language used and the disposition set forth were chaste and pure. In this delirious state his mind eventually narrowed down to two points: Christ the Saviour of man, and his family. Upon these two themes he was clear and logical to the very last day. He planned his pastoral charges, held protracted meetings, talked to penitents, prayed, preached, made his report to the Annual Conference, and planned for his family with a clearness and force that led one to believe that it was not so much delirium as that of the real life and heart of the man, coming forth in such power as to crowd out all other considerations. Personally, all was well with him; he desired to live to go on with his work, but he was ready "to depart and be with Christ, which is far better." He could have said with as much truth as Paul, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." But there was one care that bore upon his mind and shadowed him to the end: his wife and children. Brother Robertson's spirit has gone to God who gave it, his body laid to rest by the side of his people at Tunnel Hill, Ga. We usually say that the last duty is performed at the grave. This is not true. His loved ones remain in our care, and our last duty to him was not performed at the grave.

GEORGE WASHINGTON KILLINGER GREEN was born in Knox county, Ind., August 27, 1831. After the death of his father, his mother moved with her four children to Smyth county, Va., where he spent his youth. When twenty-four years of age he was led to God, professed religion, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; under the guidance and for the advancement of which he labored until his Master released him on that bright Sabbath morning, the 20th of May, 1894, at his home near Bland Courthouse, Va. He was licensed to exhort at Mechanicsburg, Va., May 4, 1855; and was licensed to preach at the same place by Rev. Joseph Haskew, presiding elder, January 17, 1857; and there preached his first sermon from Psalm lxxxix. 47, "Remember how short my time is." He traveled the Flat Top Mission, as a supply, for the year 1858-59. In 1858 he was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie Steel, who still survives him. The fruit of this union was one child, who died about three years before his father. Brother Green—with a large class, only one of whom remains, Rev. James Mahoney—joined the Holston Annual Conference at Abingdon, Va., in the fall of 1859, and was sent to the same work for the year 1859-60. In the fall of 1860 he was sent to the Waynesville Circuit, Haywood county, N. C., which he traveled for one year. He then located for six years. He reentered the Conference in 1867, and was appointed to the New River Circuit, Mercer county, W. Va., where he remained for three years. In the meantime the circuit was called the New River, East River, and the Princeton Circuit. From the data in hand it appears that in 1870 he was appointed to the Marysville Circuit, which he traveled for four years. At the expiration of which time, on account of ill health, he did not take work, intending to rest, but during this year he supplied the Jefferson Circuit, Ashe county, N. C., for a few months. The next year he was sent to the Seddon Circuit. He served the Princeton Circuit in 1878-79; Elk Creek, 1879-81; was at home in 1881-82; was sent to the Sharon Springs Circuit, 1883-84; Pocahontas, 1884-85; Clear Fork, 1885-86; Kingsport, 1886-88; Hillsville Circuit, 1888-90; and became a supernumerary at the close of his work there. In 1891 he was granted a superannuated relation, which relation he sustained until his death. As a citizen brother Green was a man of unswerving integrity, loyal and true. He was a strong temperance man. As a minister he was fearless, and preached the gospel with great boldness. He had fine natural abilities, and was a good preacher. There was a deep current of pathos sweeping through his sermons which went deep down into human hearts. He had clear conceptions of the doctrines of the Bible, and was never happier than when defending them and the institutions and rules of his Church. He was a strong disciplinarian. In his old days his preaching was like a spring morning, exceedingly sweet and mellow. He was fond of Sunday-school work; had organized and was superintending two schools. During his last illness, which only lasted one week, he said to a visitor: "Brother, I will say to you as the venerable Dr. McFerrin said to his son, 'If I should slip off while you are gone, you know where to find me.'" Like the brave soldier that he was, he fell at his post.

JOHN R. BELLAMY was born July 12, 1866; and died at Coal Creek, Tenn., September 25, 1894. In the consideration of his short life and his sudden death there is profitable instruction. Brother Bellamy was born and reared in Scott county, Va. He graduated from Hiwassee College in May, 1891, and joined the Holston Conference in October, 1891, at Chattanooga. His first appointment was at Elizabethton, Tenn. At that place he was married to Miss Nana Wilcox. From Elizabethton he was sent to Mendota, Va. At the last Annual Conference he was sent to Coal Creek, Tenn., at which place he contracted typhoid fever, and died after a sickness of a little more than two weeks. In many respects brother Bellamy was a self-made man. His early life was spent on his father's farm, where he had very limited opportunities for securing an education, but by his own efforts and determination he got a start in school, and then for a number of years served as a teacher, thus working his way through college. After leaving college he continued his studies, being always animated by a desire to steadily increase his store of knowledge. He was fond of his books. Filled with high aspirations, he was ambitious to an unusual degree, but in a godly way. He felt a strong call to the ministry. It is seldom that we see a young man so free from worldly desires: in this respect he was well qualified for the life of an itinerant Methodist preacher. He repeatedly declared that he only wanted enough of this world's goods to secure a living and an education for himself and family. His life gave evidence of humility of spirit. He was thoroughly consecrated to the ministry, and full of zeal and energy in the work of the Church. He was constantly planning to make his work more extensive and effective. At his appointments he did good work in the line of church and parsonage building, working with his own hands and contributing liberally of his own means. In the few months he was at Coal Creek he secured a parsonage, and was prepared to erect a new church building. He loved his people, and they loved him for his pure, unselfish spirit. He desired to be returned to Coal Creek, and his people wanted him back. The great Bishop of souls had another appointment for him, and transferred him to his courts above. When the summons came he was given no time in which to prepare for the change; he needed none. His house was in order; he was ready. After two weeks of suffering the gentle, sweet-spirited Bellamy passed quietly from earth to heaven, leaving a broken-hearted widow and a fatherless child. He was buried at Elizabethton, September 27, 1894.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 16. Who are located this year? None.

Ques. 17. Who are supernumerary? None.

Ques. 18. Who are superannuated? None.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? E. Nakayama. 1.

E. NAKAYAMA, the fourth son of Nakayama Yorokurō, was born June 23, the third year Keiwo, in the town of Fuchiu, in the province of Bingo. At the early age of five years his mother died, and five years later saw the death of his father, and he was left to the care of his grandmother. "From his earlier years," says a friend who knew him well, "he had in a marked degree self-reliance and a spirit of independence." In early youth he learned Chinese characters in the Kiemō Sho, and later studied Chinese literature under the direction of Gokyu Hisabumi. In September, the fifteenth of Meiji, he became a student of the Chiu-Gakko of Hiroshima, where he displayed superior qualities as a student, making rapid progress in learning. But before the completion of his Chiu-Gakko course he withdrew from the school, and, returning to his home, made preparation to go to Tokio for study. Having gone to the capital, he entered the Kyoritsu Gakusha, where he gave special attention to the study of English, with a view to entering upon the study of medicine; but in the spring of the nineteenth of Meiji he accepted a call to a position as teacher of English in the town of Shobara, in Hiroshima-ken. In this position he made friends among students and teachers, and became one of the most popular teachers. The twentieth year of Meiji he went to Osaka, and was for some time in the home of his brother, who, with his family, was a Christian. In this home he saw and felt the power of Christian example, and was convinced that Christianity was good. Returning to Shobara a second time, he consulted with two or three friends, and they agreed together to study the Bible. Just about this time they heard that a missionary had come to the city of Hiroshima, and they sent a letter to Dr. J. W. Lambuth, asking him to come and instruct them more fully. Dr. Lambuth gave his cheerful consent, and, accompanied by Mr. Sunamoto, went to Shobara, where he taught these young men the way of life. The friend quoted above expresses the opinion that it was through the influence of Dr. Lambuth more than of any other that our brother was led to Christ. He was baptized, with several others, by Dr. Lambuth, on the 12th of June, the twentieth year of Meiji. After baptism he began to make his light shine for the benefit of others, and was able to lead others to embrace the truth. Soon after this time he came to Kobé and made an engagement with Dr. Lambuth to teach English in the night school, and at the same time do Christian work whenever he was needed. For more than six years of almost constant labor as student and preacher he was found faithful to duty, a conscientious, exemplary Christian. He impressed himself as a man of God, and better than any words one may write does his life tell its own beautiful story. Almost before friends were aware of his sickness the disease which caused his death had taken such a hold upon him as to confine him to his bed. The best medical counsel was immediately sought, but the disease had already spread beyond control. At the home of a devoted friend and classmate, to which he was removed from the hospital, he died in peace March 23, 1894. One day during his illness, which he already knew was unto death, he said to his wife, "I will never utter one word of complaint about my sickness."

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? R. Lancaster. 1.

RANSOM LANCASTER was born in Madison county, Ky., on the old Boonesboro site, April 15, 1818. He was the son of Littleton and Nancy (Hays) Lancaster. His father was a native of South Carolina, his mother a native Kentuckian. Early in life he moved with his parents to Daviess county, where he grew up to manhood, in a section somewhat noted for its peculiar sports and worldly amusements, in which as a youth he was subject to temptations not favorable to the development of Christian character. Attending a camp meeting at old Pleasant Green camp ground, he was powerfully converted and at once united with the Church. His conversion was thorough, and through a ministry of more than half a century he never doubted its genuineness, which fact was certified by his unblemished life from that day until the summons came from on high. His earnestness and his gifts soon led to his being licensed to exhort, and at a quarterly meeting held for Yellow Banks Circuit, May 30, 1840, by Rev. Benjamin F. Crouch, he was licensed as a local preacher, and assisted in several revival meetings during the ensuing summer months. His educational facilities had been very meager, and he set about studying in earnest to fit himself for his life work. He was recommended and received on trial at the session of the Kentucky Annual Conference held in Maysville, Ky., in the fall of 1841. His first appointment was Barboursville Circuit, where he met with great success. At the Conference of 1842 he was assigned to Somerset Circuit, "prosecuting his work with fidelity and success," says Dr. Redford, in "Cavaliers of Methodism." The Western Christian Advocate, of June 9 of the following year (1843), reported "one hundred and eighteen members received on probation up to May 28." He was ordained deacon by Bishop Thomas A. Morris, at Louisville, Ky., September 17, 1843; and elder by Bishop Joshua Soule, at Frankfort, Ky., September 14, 1845.

The year 1844, notable as the year of the division of the Church, found him at work within the territory since included in the Western Virginia Conference, and he took no small part in the discussions and alignment that followed that historic strife of border Methodism. He continued in the bounds of that Conference until the session held in Greenupburg in the fall of 1858, when he returned to the Kentucky Conference, having filled some of the leading appointments in the Western Virginia Conference, viz., Parkersburg, Ravenswood, Barboursville, Kanawha, Salines, Summersville, Ashland, Cannonsburg, Greenupburg, and the Green Brier District as pre-iding elder. Greenupburg was his last charge in that Conference, and the closing year was crowned with perhaps one of the best revivals that church has ever had. In September, 1858, he was assigned to the Sharpsburg Circuit in the Kentucky Conference, where he spent two very pleasant and successful years. Thence he went to Falmouth Circuit, which work included what is now the Oddville and Berry circuits, in addition to the town of Falmouth. Locating his family at Oddville, he continuously resided there up to the spring of 1885, the war being largely responsible for that long residence, which was the result of connection with business pursuits. He became deeply attached to the community and to its people, and he especially loved the churches and the people on the Oddville Circuit whom he served so long. From this place of residence he served numerous appointments within his reach, to get to some of them requiring no little exposure, considering his age and his state of health, he being a life-long sufferer from asthma. His charges since moving from Oddville were Mt. Carmel and Orangeburg, Carlisle Circuit, and Berry Circuit, which was his last work. During his ministry of fifty-two years hundreds were converted and brought into the Church, and many new churches were erected. He was always in great demand for funeral occasions, and perhaps no minister in his section officiated at more funerals and married more couples than he. He was happily married May 13, 1845, to Miss Lucy White Hard, of Scioto county, O., who, with four children, survives. In an unknown grave in West Virginia lies the dust of "the little one that died" over forty-three years ago. In personal religious profession, brother Lancaster was never "loud;" he claimed no superior attainments, but was always stanch and true, knowing that he had the witness that he was an heir of salvation. He was always ready, and hence death had no terrors for him. It was, he said, "going home." "Some of these mornings I'll swing off into glory; soon I'll go up to my home in heaven, and then I'll lie down at the feet of Jesus and rest." Once while apparently asleep, extending his hands, he cried out,

"My Master!" and again, "My Father was here just now." On Thursday night before he died he repeated the seventh and eighth verses of the fourth chapter of Second Timothy: "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day," etc. Brother Lancaster's illness was long and painful, eliciting the sympathy of the entire community. His mind became enfeebled toward the close, but in lucid intervals he was victorious in faith, shouting the praise of God, to the last demonstrating that to the Christian "at the even time it shall be light." He died at 9:55 o'clock on the morning of September 30, 1893, at the age of seventy-five years, five months, and fifteen days.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? George W. Rice, J. S. Clower. 2.

GEORGE W. RICE, son of George A. and Eliza Rice, was born in Bradley county, Ark., June 13, 1859; was married to Miss Docia Lee October 2, 1881; joined the M. E. Church, South, was licensed to preach, and admitted on trial by the Little Rock Conference in 1887. His first charge was Bright Star Circuit. He went to the work alone, and traveled mostly on foot, doing a faithful year's work. In 1889 he traveled DeWitt Circuit. Here he had difficulties of a delicate nature to overcome, but he was the man for the place. His work was well and faithfully done, and he is held in grateful remembrance by the people of this charge. In 1890-91 he had charge of the Amity Circuit, doing successful work. In 1892 he was on Crystal Springs Circuit. He was placed in charge of Sheridan Circuit in December, 1892. Here, possibly, he did the best year's work of his life. When he entered upon this work spirituality was at a low ebb and Methodism much discouraged; but by his strong gospel preaching, burning zeal, fervent piety, deep spirituality, strong faith, thorough consecration, coupled with affability, conservatism, and a broad, catholic spirit, he soon revived the drooping spirits of the Methodists, imparted new courage, inspired fresh hopes, and led many to Christ. He is enshrined in the affections of this people. He was sent to the Toledo Circuit in December, 1893. He entered at once upon this work with the energy and enthusiasm so characteristic of the man. He had planned wisely and for large results, and had already accomplished much when death forced him to lay aside his work and enter upon his reward. He died about five o'clock A.M. August 7, 1894, of congestion of the brain. Brother Rice was one of nature's noblemen. The very soul of honor, he was incapable of doing a mean act or cherishing a dishonorable purpose. A big heart throbbed in his bosom, full of tenderness and sympathy for his fellows. He was ever ready to render service to humanity, and no deserving one appealed to him in vain. There was not a stain upon his character from childhood to mature manhood. In the midst of a bright career the wheels of life stood still, and his pure and gentle spirit winged its flight to congenial climes. We know where to find him. He was buried at Moore's Church, amidst the tears of a large concourse of his people.

JOHN SIMPSON CLOWER was born in Shelby county, Ala., December 24, 1846. The family having removed to the state of Arkansas, he was converted at a camp meeting held at Columbia camp ground, in the year 1861. A short time after his conversion he entered the Confederate army, and during his soldier life—whether on the march, in camp, or in the shock of battle—our brother maintained his Christian integrity, and exerted a helpful and saving influence upon others. For some time brother Clower felt that it was his duty to preach the gospel, and, having removed to the state of Texas, he obeyed the call of the Spirit, and was received on trial into the Texas Conference in the year 1868, in which Conference he traveled several years, filling his appointments with great satisfaction. In the year 188— he located, and removed to the state of Arkansas, where he labored as a local preacher for a time, but in the year 1886 he was readmitted into the Arkansas Conference, and appointed to the Waldron Circuit, where he traveled one year. The next two years he traveled Dover Circuit; then the Quitman Circuit two years; in 1891 he was transferred to the Little Rock Conference, and appointed to Austin Circuit; in 1892 he served the Gurdon Circuit. His last appointment was the Nashville Circuit, on which work he entered with his accustomed faithfulness and zeal. He planned for a vigorous campaign, and had infused into his people hope and courage, and preacher and people were looking forward to a prosperous year. But God had other plans for our brother. He was attacked with pneumonia, and, after suffering a few days, he died on the 23d of February, 1894, in the full triumph of faith, and went home to God. Brother Clower was what we may call a self-made man, not having had the advantages of early training; yet, by perseverance, he made himself a good English scholar, and was more than an average preacher; and wherever he traveled his name is like ointment poured forth.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? A. M. Wailes. 1.

ALBERT M. WAILES had been in feeble health for many years, unable to enter upon the pastoral work, and has consequently sustained a supernumerary relation to the Conference, serving God and helping humanity by teaching. Faithful in the execution of this trust, and consistent and pure as a Christian minister, he annually passed the examination of character with the welcome indorsement of his brethren and their just verdict, "Nothing against him." In the hope and Christian confidence of his brethren, we may surely trust that the same glad verdict met him at the threshold of our Father's house.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Richard H. Rivers, William W. Mann, Thomas Bottomley. 3.

RICHARD HENDERSON RIVERS was born September 11, 1814, in Montgomery county, Tenn. He was converted during a protracted meeting in Hardeman county, in August, 1830, in his sixteenth year. He began preaching without license in April, 1831, but was licensed in August of the same year. He was admitted on trial in the Tennessee Conference in October, 1831; was ordained deacon by Bishop McKendree in 1833. He then located, in order to attend school at the La Grange College, Alabama. After a two years' course under Bishop Paine in that institution, he was graduated with honor in 1835. In 1836 he was elected to the chair of ancient languages in his alma mater, which position he held with credit to himself and the college till 1843. In this year he was elected to the presidency of the Tennessee Conference Female Institute, at Athens, Ala., and took charge of the same in the fall. Here he remained till the year 1848, when he was called to the presidency of the Centenary College, in Jackson, La., of which institution he took charge in 1849. His wife was paralyzed in 1852, and on account of her sad condition he was compelled to leave Louisiana. In 1854 he was elected president of the La Grange College, in Alabama, which institution was removed to

Florence during that same year. After a most prosperous career he left this college, which was suspended at the breaking out of the war, and took charge of the Centenary College for girls, at Summerfield, Ala. At the close of the war he was compelled to go to West Tennessee to take charge of his old mother, a widow, and he an only son. He then accepted the presidency of the Somerville Institute for girls, and continued in charge till 1868. This year he was called to the Logan Female College, at Russellville, Ky. After one year's service there he was appointed by Bishop McTyeire to the pastorate of Broadway Church, at Louisville, Ky. After three years and six months Bishop Marvin appointed him to the charge of Chestnut-street Church, in the same city. In 1874 he was transferred to the Tennessee Conference, and appointed to the presidency of Martin Female College, at Pulaski, Tenn. He had a most prosperous career there, and when he resigned had 180 pupils. He desired a pastorate, and was transferred to the Alabama Conference. He was stationed first at Auburn, then at Eufaula, and then at Greenville. He was then retransferred to the Louisville Conference, and stationed at Broadway again. After four years he was sent to Shelby-street Church, now Main-street. At the close of that year, 1890, he was superannuated. He fell at his post, after an eventful and successful ministry of sixty-two years. He died Thursday, June 21, 1894, at 9:45 A.M. In these few words we have outlined the history of a great and good man. Dr. Rivers belonged to that class of old pioneer Methodist preachers very few of whom remain to bless their race. His intimate friends in the ministry, such as Pierce, Soule, Kavanaugh, Wightman, Paine, McTyeire, McFerrin, Green, and others, have all preceded him to the better land. His active ministry covered a period from the days of McKendree to the present. He passed away full of years, full of honors, and has now rejoined his old comrades on the other side, where doubtless they may even now be recounting the victories of the cross vouchsafed them in their warfare here. Dr. Rivers was all his life a very active, hard-working man. Most of his life was spent in the schoolroom, where he was eminently successful. But he was none the less successful as a pastor and preacher. He was a man of broad and liberal culture. As an author, he acquired considerable reputation. His works on mental and moral philosophy found their way into the curricula of a number of schools and colleges, and also into the course of study for our undergraduates. As a preacher and pastor he was in great demand among our churches. He was, as a preacher, earnest, aggressive, and even at times fiery in his delivery; and yet he always impressed his audiences that his gospel was one of love. Big as was his brain, his heart was bigger still, and this was the secret of his wonderful power of drawing people to him. As a pastor he had the rare gift of being able to enter into loving sympathy with his flock. Their troubles and trials were his, as well as their joys. His broad shoulders and big heart bore always heavy burdens, for the multitude were drawn to him with their sorrows as to a friend and father. His name is a precious memory in thousands of homes, and his loving ministry in times of sorrow will never pass from their minds and hearts. Our brother was also a great writer. For many years he was a regular contributor to our Church periodicals, and ever wielded a ready and facile pen. During the years of his superannuation he was a corresponding editor of the Central Methodist, our Conference organ. This labor sweetened his declining years. He longed to be able to again preach the gospel, and, as he expressed it, "at once to cease to work and live." His short weekly sermons in the Central Methodist carried hope and renewed life into thousands of hearts, and enabled him to feel that his work was not altogether done. Many were the letters of thanks sent him by other sufferers, who had been greatly helped by his words of cheer and his expressions of abiding faith in God. Dr. Rivers was literally "perfected through suffering." During the last thirty-eight years of his life he was never without pain. A cruel accident not only crippled him for life, but left him a sufferer whose pain ended only with death. But those who visited him in his affliction always carried away a rich blessing. Patient, resigned, meek, cheerful, full of faith, love, gentleness, and goodness, it was a benediction to sit by his bedside and learn the lessons of a well-rounded Christian character. He was never known to complain of his sufferings, though they were often excruciating and terrible to witness. Often, while his own body was racked with pain, with a smile upon his lips he would sit and offer words of comfort and cheer to his discouraged fellow-preachers, or to some bereaved heart who had come to him for help. On June 9, 1836, he was happily married to Miss Martha B. C. Jones. For fifty-six years they trod the path of life together. She was to him an angel of mercy, constant and true in health and in sickness. Day and night she was with him through all the years of his prolonged affliction, tireless in her ministrations for his comfort, devoted in her tender care and love. It was touching indeed to witness the devotion of this aged couple in the last days of their united pilgrimage. Her heart now is desolate, but glad in the hope of meeting again in the near future. Seven children blessed their married life, only three of whom survive him. With such a legacy of a pure and holy life, they sorrow not as those who have no hope. In our Father's house a happy reunion awaits them.

WILLIAM WYATT MANN was born in Buckingham county, Va., in 1817. He was the son of Rev. Charles Mann, an estimable local preacher of Muhlenberg county, Ky. His mother's maiden name was Penn, a name honored in Kentucky and Missouri Methodist history. He was converted in 1832, and was licensed to preach in 1834 at the early age of seventeen years. He was a local preacher for a number of years, frequently traveling under the presiding elder as a supply. He was married to Miss Mary A. Keller, daughter of Michael Keller, of Logan county, Ky., in 1848. He was admitted into the Louisville Annual Conference at Greenburg in 1848; ordained deacon by Bishop Paine at Russellville, Ky., in 1854, and received into full connection. He filled the following pastoral charges: Jefferson-town, 1850; Albany, 1851-53; Rochester Mission, 1854; Todd Circuit, 1855; Christian Mission, 1856-57; superannuated, 1858; Rochester Mission, 1859; Clifty Mission, 1860-62; Gordonsville, 1863-64; Rochester, 1865; supernumerary, 1865-68; Bacon Creek, 1869; supernumerary, 1870; West Greenville, 1871-74; supernumerary, 1875, and was never again effective. He died April 3, 1894, aged seventy-seven years. He was a man of good native intellect, with a clear, sprightly mind. He was familiar with our standard authors, and was pronounced a good theologian. He was a good preacher; not an orator, but strong, sensible, earnest. In manner he was like a torrent—rushing, boisterous. He was successful in revival work. He served mainly on our harder fields, and won souls for the Lord. His record is on high. As a man he was found faithful in all the relations of life. He had a large heart, full of love. He was modest and retiring in disposition, in honor preferring others. He was a meek, sweet-spirited Christian, in whom was found no guile. His testimony was clear to the last. To a friend taking leave of him on the day of his death, who said, "I must now go home," he replied: "I too will soon be at home!" He said to his family: "There is nothing between me and my God; my way is clear, my baggage is packed and checked. I am just waiting for the summons."

THOMAS BOTTOMLEY. (No memoir.) By request of his family the memorial service for brother Bottomley was deferred until next year.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Daniel A. Ross, Junius P. Walker, James M. Spence, William O. Lanier, Albert H. Thomas, James W. Knott, Turner P. Holman. 7.

DANIEL ASBURY ROSS, son of John W. and Martha T. Ross, was born in Autauga county, Ala., December 10, 1831. In his boyhood the family removed to Hardeman county, Tenn., where he was reared to manhood, and where he spent the greater part of his life on the farm and in the ministry. His school years were limited, as were his attainments in learning. But he enjoyed the blessings of religious education at home and in the house of God; for in those days, as now, Methodism, in its membership as well as its ministry, was prevalent and powerful in that country. In his sixteenth year he embraced religion, and immediately united with God's people, becoming a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The facts are not at hand with regard to his Christian life as a youth and in manhood's prime while he lingered in the ranks of the laity. From the well-known features of character displayed in later life, from his regular habits, and the sober yet cheerful spirit breathed by him, it may well be believed that he was faithful to the Master, to the Church, and to his fellow-men. It was under the influence of a clear sense of duty—the call of God—that he asked and received license to preach the gospel; and in 1872, at Somerville, he was admitted on trial into the Memphis Conference, receiving in due course deacon's and elder's orders, as well as admission into full connection. Ever since, to the close of his life, his name has been on the effective list; and he has done approved work as a traveling preacher, serving the following circuits: Whiteville, Bolivar, Adamsville, Bethel Springs, Tiptonville, Wickliffe, Birmingham, Wadesboro, Big Sandy, and Toone (mission), which is the former Bolivar Circuit, a charge of which, in all, he was pastor five years, and when he died had entered upon the second year of his last term. He served two years on several other circuits in the above list. He loved not the world and its ways. He was an humble, patient, and earnest Christian, who loved God and his people, enjoying communion with God and the fellowship of the saints. He was a plain, practical preacher, and often exhorted with fervor and power. Sometimes, under the divine baptism, his preaching was very efficacious and successful, winning souls to Christ and comforting God's people. In his last years his religious experience was much enlarged and deepened and brightened, and in a meek, quiet way he gave evidence of enjoying the blessing of perfect love. He was ripening for the harvest. He attended our late Conference, and greatly enjoyed his reunion with the beloved brethren in the ministry, among whom he had labored and suffered for twenty-one years. Immediately after the adjournment he returned to his parsonage home at Toone to begin, as he thought, another year's hard work. But the first night after his return he was stricken with the disease which violently and most painfully broke down the strong man's frame, and notwithstanding the untiring attention of faithful physicians and a host of friends, and the vigils and prayers of his wife and other relatives, terminated in death December 23, 1893. During all his illness, and in the midst of acute and intense suffering, he was most patient, being perfectly resigned to the will of God. Often he gave the most positive assurances of his readiness for the great change and for the home in heaven. Prayer and praise filled his heart, and fell often from his lips. The day before he died he held family prayers with his wife and other loved ones, leaving his bed and kneeling with them at the home altar for this last most tender service. Through God's abounding grace his latest conscious hours brightly witnessed to his peace and joy in the Lord and to his glorious hope of eternal life. Besides his wife, a brother and two sisters mourn for him till they meet again. And with them and other relatives mourn many dear friends, as well as his brethren of the Memphis Conference. After a funeral service at the Methodist Church in Toone, the remains were laid to rest with kindred dead in the old Bethlehem Church graveyard, so dear to the family as the last resting place of three generations.

JUNIUS PULLIAM WALKER, son of Dr. Jacob G. and Louisa E. Walker, was born in Fayette county, Tenn., February 1, 1849, and died at the home of Rev. W. M. Leatherwood, in Bonham, Tex., February 3, 1894, where he had gone in search of health. Brother Walker was principally educated at Andrew College, Trenton, Tenn., under the presidency of the lamented Dr. Smith W. Moore. He was happily converted in 1866, under the ministry of Dr. Thomas L. Boswell, and in 1867, under his administration, was licensed to preach. He was admitted on trial in the Memphis Conference in 1870, from which time until the day of his death he received his appointments from his Conference, and was ever at his post of duty. The deceased was twice happily married. He leaves a wife and six children, besides an aged mother, brother, and sister. Of his life and character brother Leatherwood says: "June Walker was one of the purest men I ever knew, and I knew him well. Faithful to the Church, humble, consecrated, laborious, a good preacher, successful in his work, and dearly beloved by those he served. No Church has had a nobler man. As husband, father, and friend, he had but few equals. Time nor distance weaned him from those he loved." When brother Leatherwood mentioned the intense sufferings he was undergoing, and how he felt for him, brother Walker said: "Yes, it seems that days of suffering are appointed unto me, but I would not interfere with the will of God. He knows and does what is best for us. I have known too much of his goodness and wisdom to question him now. If the Lord wants me, I have nothing to do but die. I am happy in my greatest sufferings." The Lord did want him, and took him. And, while far from home and family, he wanted not for tender care. His lifeless form was brought back to his Tennessee home, and laid to rest in the cemetery of old Asbury Church to await the call of God in the morning of the resurrection.

JAMES M. SPENCE died in Paducah, Ky., December 20, 1893. He began his itinerant life in the Memphis Conference in 1854 as a probationer. In 1856 he was received into full connection, and ordained deacon by Bishop Early, and was ordained elder in 1858 by Bishop Paine. He left the seat of the last Annual Conference suffering with an aggravated case of lagrippe, and on the 15th of December he was stricken with paralysis, and from the first of the attack he became unconscious, in which state he remained until his death. The funeral service was conducted at the Third-street Church, Paducah, of which church he was the pastor. His remains were conveyed to Martin, Tenn., and taken thence to a country cemetery and laid to rest. He leaves seven grown children, sons and daughters, to lament the death of an affectionate father. Brother Spence came into the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with small educational attainments, having had but few advantages in his youth. By close application and hard study he finished the Conference course of study with honor, and by continued habits of study he made good advancement in the higher branches of a literary course, having also attained a knowledge of the Latin and Greek languages. He was a man of well-poised mind and good executive ability as an officer of first rank among his brethren. He was a sound doctrinal preacher, a good pastor, always taking oversight of the churches in wisdom and love. He was a devoted friend, an affectionate husband and father. He filled mission, circuit, station, and district work with much satisfaction to the authorities of the Church of God, and had among us a most successful ministry. He lived loved and honored, and died lamented.

WILLIAM O. LANIER was born in Alabama November 12, 1835, and in his childhood removed to Carroll county, Tenn., where he was reared and educated. He professed faith in Christ early in life, under the ministry of Rev. Abner Cooper, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He was ordained a local deacon in Arkadelphia, Ark., by Bishop Pierce in 1867. He was received into full connection in the Memphis Conference in 1873. He filled important charges in this Conference. He was ever found at the post of duty as an itinerant preacher, well and faithfully doing all the work committed to him. He was an instructive preacher and a much loved pastor, and maintained an unimpeachable character among the people. Many souls were converted to God through his ministry. He was a devoted husband, a kind father. He leaves two grown sons, two grown daughters, and a wife, to mourn their loss. Brother Lanier's last appointment was Troy Circuit. He died suddenly from hemorrhage of the throat and lungs. So sudden was his death that, falling from his feet to the floor, he was only able to utter a word or two to his family, saying, "I am dying." This sad event occurred in the parsonage in Troy, Tenn., December 23, 1893. Our dear brother laid down his body with his charge, and "ceased at once to work and live," leaving upon our minds and hearts the lesson, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Master cometh." We will hold him in affectionate remembrance and honor him as he honored Christ, and extend to his bereaved wife and children our sincere Christian sympathy and brotherly care.

ALBERT H. THOMAS was born near Trenton, in Gibson county, Tenn., August 28, 1825; and died at his home in Memphis, Tenn., January 9, 1894. He was married to Miss Eliza G. Green, at the Marshall Female Institute, Mississippi, September 23, 1856. Eight children were born to them, six of whom, with their mother, are still living, and with loving, affectionate remembrance are cherishing the many beautiful Christian graces that adorned the now sainted husband and father. Brother Thomas was educated at West Tennessee College, Jackson, Tenn., and studied law at the Mississippi University, Oxford, Miss. Early after his conversion to God he felt moved by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel, and asked and obtained a license to preach. He was admitted on trial in 1848, and into full connection in the Memphis Conference in 1850, and ordained deacon by Bishop Capers, and in 1852 he was ordained an elder by Bishop Andrew. We can only give a limited number of the appointments he filled in his forty-two years of active itinerant life, viz.: Somerville Station; Ripley Station and Circuit; Paducah Station; Asbury Chapel Station; Memphis, Tenn.; Oxford Station and Circuit; Panola Circuit, three years; Sardis Circuit, two years; Brownsville Station, two years; Wesley Chapel, Memphis, Tenn., two years; City Mission, Memphis, four years; Memphis District, presiding elder, eight years; Somerville District, four years; Jackson District, one year; Bethlehem Circuit, four years; and Embury Circuit, which was his last appointment in the active ministry. These appointments are not named in the regular order as to time. Brother Thomas's health failed some years before his death, so much so that he was forced to take a superannuated relation. He was urbane and dignified in his manners and pure in spirit. He was a laborious student and deeply pious; hence he was strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. He was truly a workman that needed not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of God, giving to each and every hearer their portion in season. God did not give to our brother the spirit of fear, but the spirit of power and of love and of a strong mind. His preaching was logical and eloquent. His figures of speech and his illustrations were ornate, chaste, and beautiful, and all aglow with the very energy of love; and his congregations dwelt with rapt attention on the word of God from his lips. But he was not more loved and admired as a preacher than he was as a pastor. Purity of manners and heartfelt love for his fellow-man always characterized his intercourse with the people. Such a preacher as he was could not but be abundantly useful; hence he won many souls to Christ, and built up the Church of God, and forwarded the kingdom of Christ on all his charges. Dr. W. C. Johnson gave a just and deserved compliment to our brother as a preacher when he said of him: "Our brother Thomas is one of the foremost preachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." He was a great sufferer for months preceding his death. His many friends and his brethren in the ministry who visited him in his last sickness testify to his complete resignation to the will of God, and to his patience to the very last hour. He was heard to say, when questioned as to his state of mind when under the most intense pain: "My suffering is all right; it is the will of God." God gave him beautiful visions as he neared the crossing of the river of death, and the eyes of his faith were so feasted with the view of the resplendent glories awaiting him on the other shore that he lost sight, in a great measure, of the chilling stream that flowed at his feet; and the dark clouds that so often overshadow the crossing were rifted away by the promise of Jesus, which was sweetly whispered to him in the last trying hour: "I will come for you, and take you to myself, that where I am there you may be also." The loving hearts and tender hands of his cultured and devoted wife and children, who kept constant vigils in his room and about his dying bed, together with the ministering angels, brought most forcibly to the mind of those who visited him from day to day the words: "The chamber where the good man meets his fate is favored above the common walks of life—quite on the verge of heaven."

JAMES W. KNOTT died at his home in Memphis, Tenn., May 11, 1894. He was born in North Carolina in May, 1821, but was reared in West Tennessee, where he grew up to manhood. He professed religion in early life, and was soundly converted, which was clearly indicated by his life and conversation. Being called to the ministry, he "conferred not with flesh and blood," did not try to flee from the presence of the Lord in going to Tarshish, like Jonah of old, but was "obedient unto the heavenly calling" in taking the usual steps to obtain license to preach and recommendation for admission into the Memphis Conference in the year 1844, a memorable year in the history of American Methodism. From this time our young preacher gave diligence to reading, study, and prayer, exhortation and preaching, and thereby made rapid improvement in "gifts, grace, and usefulness." Hence he soon rose to such standing in the Conference and in such demand among the people that he was no drug in the bishop's cabinet—ready to go anywhere he was sent, and always useful. He was sound in Methodist doctrines, discipline, and usages; never running after strange doctrines and newfangled theories which are not to edification and comfort. On the contrary, he was more for keeping than mending our rules, because he loved the Church and her institutions. Brother Knott moved to the city of Memphis in the year 1853, and was stationed from time to time at First Church, Central Church, and other churches around the city from that time until the civil war began. During that national calamity, when the Federals got possession of Memphis, they seized the First Church, to which they had no right, whereupon brother Knott wrote to President Lincoln and the Secretary of War at Washington City, and they restored the church to its rightful owners, and he held it to the end of the war. From that time until he retired from active service in the Conference he filled important work, for years being presiding elder of different districts in the North Mississippi Conference. After having spent fifty years in the Master's cause, the time of the end with him began to draw near. He had been in failing health since last fall, but it was not until February last that he had his first serious attack; and from that time he seemed to know and feel that his earthly career was nearly ended. He talked freely and constantly of his death, detailing all arrangements for his funeral, and strictly enjoining unostentation on the occasion. Once, when he thought he was dying, he said: "If this be death, tell my friends that death is sweet." The last sentence he uttered, with his hands clasped on his breast, and looking up, was: "Glory be to God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, amen!" Brother Knott was in a high degree unselfish and unsuspecting. He dispensed an open and free charity to the needy according to his means. He lived an earnest, conscientious Christian life, and in the prime of his ministry was one of the ablest ministers among us; and in the exercise of that ministry he played a conspicuous part in planting Methodism and sowing the seeds of Christianity on the wild and primitive Chickasaw bluffs. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

TURNER P. HOLMAN was born October 11, 1817, and died November 9, 1894, in Dyersburg, Tenn., aged seventy-seven years and twenty-eight days. He was a traveling preacher in the Methodist Church for fifty-six years, filling mission, circuit, station, and district work always acceptably and usefully. He was a noble man and Christian gentleman, much loved and esteemed by his brethren in the ministry and by all the people. Modesty and gentleness distinguished him in his high and holy office work in the house of God and in the homes of the flocks of which he had the oversight. He gave attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine, and was himself an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity. His manner in the delivery of his sermons was that of dignity and grace. He had the anointing of the Holy Ghost upon him in such measure and fullness that his audiences were filled with reverence for him and for the holy place he was called to fill. He guided his household affairs and family with discretion, and his wife, who years ago passed up from earth to glory, was a suitable coworker with him. Brother Holman's whole ministerial and social life was adorned with the beauty of holiness. The names of the charges he served cannot be given, on account of the absence of the Conference Journal. Brother Holman had been superannuated for several years. He was for the most part confined to his room and bed for months before his death, and received the constant and affectionate attention of his son, Dr. R. S. Holman, and his family, and was visited by his numerous friends, who ministered to him in all tenderness and love. The presiding elder of the district visited him often, and on the occasion of his last visit he asked our dying brother if he knew him, and, receiving no answer, he leaned close to his pillow and asked him if he knew Jesus, and his dying countenance was suddenly lighted up with a smile as sweet as if it had been from heaven, and he responded in a low and labored whisper, "Yes." O how precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints! Brother Holman was for a long time afflicted with a sort of continually increasing paralysis, and for weeks before his death he lost his rational powers, and really it seemed that the name of Jesus, whom he had preached so long, restored his reason for a moment, and refreshed his soul in death. His body was taken to Bethlehem cemetery, Shelby county, Tenn., and interred by the side of his wife, whose sanctified spirit had for years been in heaven, waiting and watching for him.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except J. C. Hooks, who was expelled.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 22. How many infants have been baptized during the year? 1,086.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? George T. Vickers. 1.

GEORGE T. VICKERS was born in Sudlersville, Queen Anne county, Md., July 12, 1821; and died at Covington, La., November 22, 1894, after a brief illness of some seven days. At the time of his death he was upon the superannuated list, and headed the Conference roll, as the oldest member in unbroken connection. Brother Vickers was converted in Exeter-street Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, Md., in January, 1840. Shortly afterwards he "started west," as it was then called, thinking to go to the state of Tennessee, but landed in Mississippi, and engaged in the avocation of a school teacher. In November, 1846, while living on what was called "Cole's Creek Circuit," Rev. Benjamin M. Drake, being presiding elder, he was licensed to preach, and in December of the same year, at Natchez, Miss., he entered the Mississippi Conference on trial. The early records of the Mississippi Conference having been destroyed by fire, the different charges he served during his active ministry cannot be noted here. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Paine, at Vicksburg, in 1848, and ordained elder by Bishop Capers, in 1850. After an active ministry, until about the year 1862 or 1863, on account of impaired health, he was placed on the supernumerary list. He then located himself at Covington, St. Tammany parish, La., where he has resided ever since. While supernumerary he supplied Covington Circuit several times, and when not officially engaged by the presiding elder he kept up wayside appointments in obscure neighborhoods as long as he was able to get about in safety to his health. For several years past he has been upon the superannuated roll, though never a beneficiary to any great extent, he having accumulated sufficient means to provide for his own maintenance. Of classical education, he had the ability to grace a metropolitan pulpit, yet he shrank from notoriety, and confined himself for the past thirty-five years to St. Tammany parish, La. He was a Bible student, and was ardently devoted to Church history. He was an able defender of Methodist doctrines, and firmly believed that Methodism was the handiwork of God, as his ingeniously written book, "Methodism in Prophecy," attests. He was of a poetical turn of mind, and the effusions from his pen will bear criticism. He loved to preach as well as sing the gospel, for he felt that the glad news had done great things for him. Brother Vickers was a pious man, and of religious habits. His reverence for God and holy things was profound. Conscientious to an extreme degree, his standard of righteousness was very exalted. Feeling that the use of tobacco was sinful, he resolved before the Lord to quit it; but having so long been a victim to the tobacco habit, in an evil hour he broke his vow, and ever after felt that while God forgave him still he was kept in the outer court, not permitted to see the King's face. This troubled him to the end of his life. Brother Vickers was a lover of the poor, as many a widow and orphan in St. Tammany parish can testify. The last article from his pen was, "The Claims of Charity," and was published in the local paper with the editorial notice of his death. He never married. Seventy-three years of pilgrimage did not take the boy out of his heart. He loved the children, and the children loved him. He was the superintendent of Covington Sunday school, and the last public address of his ministry was a talk to the Sunday school the Sunday prior to his attack of illness. His health had been precarious for some time, and about November 15 he became quite weak, with slight fever. During the last days of his life he said that he was trusting solely in the Lord, and committed himself fully into his hands. November 22 he peacefully passed into rest. That he loved the Church is manifest in his last will and testament, wherein he bequeaths jointly to the General Board of Missions, M. E. Church, South, and the Conference fund of the Mississippi Conference, for the benefit of superannuated ministers, widows, and orphans, whatever is realized from the sale of his town property, after all debts are paid. He was buried from the Methodist Church at Covington. The building was crowded by saint and sinner, anxious to pay some tribute to his memory. The Sunday-school children in a body followed him to the grave, and embowered it with flowers. Everybody felt that a man of God had been called from labor unto rest.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Henry Kay, Lilburn Rush. 2.

HENRY KAY was born February 27, 1840, in Dover, Tenn.; was converted in 1856 in St. Joseph, Mo., and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. E. K. Miller. He was a deeply pious and promising young man; attended the public primary and high schools of St. Joseph, Mo., and later the Dover Academy, Kentucky. He was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Empire Circuit, Louisville Conference, in 1864, and recommended by the Quarterly Conference of this circuit for admission on trial in the Louisville Conference in 1865, and was received at the same Conference. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Doggett in October, 1866, at Elizabethtown, Ky., and was ordained elder by Bishop Wightman at Carrollton, Mo., in September, 1873, and at the same time and place was admitted into full connection in the Missouri Conference. His appointments were Empire Circuit, New Roe, Salem and Rose Lane, in the Louisville Conference, when he was transferred to the Missouri Conference, where he served successfully the following charges: Wentzville, Wright City, Auburn, Williamsburg, Vandalia Mission (two years), Montgomery City (four years), Williamsburg, Hardin, De Witt, Vandalia, Millersburg, Florida, Parkville, Spruce Street and King Hill, St. Joseph, and Maryville Circuit, in which last charge he was able to continue only a part of the year. At the Conference held one year ago at Montgomery City he was placed in the superannuated relation, and a few months later died, being about fifty-four years of age, and having been an itinerant preacher nearly thirty years. He was diligent, faithful, useful, and humble, and we believe the great day will prove that he did not labor in vain.

LILBURN RUSH, whose name was referred to this session of the Conference as desiring a superannuated relation, has fallen on sleep in Jesus, and has gone to that land "where age hath no power o'er the fadeless frame." We express our sympathies with his afflicted family, and commend them to the care of Him who says the widow and orphan are his especial care. We rejoice that we have had him as a father, leader, and companion, and when our pilgrimage is over we hope to meet him in that sinless clime above.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Rufus W. Coons, Marcus G. Williams, Charles E. McGibboney, Anderson G. Copeland, Nathaniel H. Self. 5.

RUFUS W. COONS, son of Charles and Nancy Coons, was born in Tuscaloosa county, Ala., August 4, 1829. During his childhood his parents moved to Pickens county, Ala., and in that county, at a camp meeting in 1846, he was converted, and joined the M. E. Church, South. June 3, 1854, he was licensed to preach on Frankfort Mission by the Quarterly Conference, held by Rev. J. D. Barbee. In 1861 he entered the southern army, and remained there until the war closed. In 1866 he joined the Mobile Conference. In 1867 he was ordained deacon at Marion, by Bishop James O. Andrew. In 1873 he was ordained elder, by Bishop Marvin, at Talladega. During his ministry he served the following charges: Blount Springs Mission, 1867-68; Cahaba Mission, 1869; Murphree's Valley Circuit, 1870-71; Blountsville Circuit, 1872-74; Asheville Circuit, 1875; Murphree's Valley Circuit, 1876; Maysville Circuit, 1877-78; Lentzville Circuit, 1879; Socapatoy Circuit, 1880-82; Pinckneyville Circuit, 1883-84; Talladega Circuit, 1885; Daviston Circuit, 1886-87; Murphree's Valley Circuit, 1888-89; Somerville Circuit, 1890-91; New Decatur Mission, 1892; Coosa Valley Circuit, 1893. He entered the Elkmont Circuit for 1894 with his usual zeal and earnestness to do a faithful year's work for his Master, but his health failed, and he only lingered there a short time. He filled his appointments within two weeks of his death, which occurred March 4, 1894. Brother Coons loved the Church, and was never happier than when holding up the cross of Christ to perishing sinners. He was married twice—first to Miss Sarah A. Burnet, of Jefferson county, Ala., and then to Miss Bettie Crump, of Blount county, Ala. The last mentioned and four children survive him to mourn, so far as this world is concerned, their irreparable loss. Brother Coons was truly a devoted and tender husband, a kind and loving father. He loved his brethren sincerely, and highly appreciated all his friends. As a preacher he was sincere. He was true to his convictions, and true to himself, and he was true to the people to whom he preached; neither fearing their frowns nor courting their smiles, but faithfully warning them when he saw them in danger. It was his joy and delight to urge Christians to greater diligence and faithfulness, and to point penitent sinners to the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." But he has heard the welcome, "Well done." He rests from his labors, and his works will follow him.

MARCUS G. WILLIAMS, son of Justinian and Elizabeth Williams, was born in Boonville, Mo., October 25, 1831. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at Ross Chapel, on the Chickasaw, in North Alabama, some time during the year 1853. March 18, 1854, at Alsboro, one of the appointments of the same circuit, he was licensed to preach by Rev. Finch P. Scruggs, presiding elder of the Florence District. In October of the same year he was received on trial into the Tennessee Conference, held in Florence, Ala., and appointed junior preacher on the Savannah Circuit, with James McCrackin in charge. The following year he served the Waterloo Circuit. At the end of this Conference year the Tennessee Conference met in Huntsville, Ala., where brother Williams was ordained deacon by Bishop James O. Andrew. At this Conference he was appointed to the Fayetteville Station, Tennessee. Some time during this year he was married to Miss M. C. Coffee, of Lauderdale county, Ala. The following year he served the Shoal Circuit, and at the next Conference, which met in McMinnville, Tenn., was ordained elder by Bishop James O. Andrew. His next appointment was Rogersville and Driskill Chapel, where he remained one year, and was then appointed to Richland Circuit, in Giles county, Tenn. At the end of this Conference year the Richland Circuit was divided, and brother Williams was appointed to the section called Shiloh, which lay partly in Giles and partly in Lincoln county. This year (1861) the war began, and he volunteered and entered the service as chaplain of the Third Tennessee Infantry. The minutes of the Conference show that in 1862 he was appointed junior preacher on Prospect Circuit, but really his work was principally in the army. In 1863-64 the Conference held no regular session, so that we are unable to trace his work by any minutes of these two years, but we know that he remained in the army work until about the beginning of 1865. This year the war closed, and we find that he was appointed to Shady Grove and Ebenezer charges. In 1866 he was transferred to Arkansas Conference, and stationed at Jacksonport, which he served for two years. At the end of this Conference year he was transferred to the St. Louis Conference, and stationed at Boonville, Mo., his childhood home. In 1869 he was appointed to Arrow Rock and Marshall, where he remained two years. Thence he went to Pleasant Hill Circuit, which he served one year, and was again appointed to Arrow Rock and Marshall, where he remained two years, making four years in all spent on this work. This year, having almost lost his voice by reason of throat trouble, for the first and only time in life he asked to be located. But, recovering somewhat by the next session of the Conference, he was readmitted, and appointed to Waverly Station. The following Conference he was appointed to Lexington Station, which he served for three years. During the third year of his pastorate here (1878) the presidency of the Central Female College became vacant, and he was called to fill the place, in connection with pastoral work. At the beginning of the next session he was elected professor of languages in that college, but soon after Conference he resigned, and returned to North Alabama, and was employed on the New Market Circuit. At the next session of his (St. Louis) Conference he asked to be transferred to the North Alabama Conference, and was appointed to New Market Circuit. His next charge was Tuscumbia Station, which he filled for two years (1881-82). The next year (1883) he went to Leighton Circuit, and was reappointed to that charge for the next year, but was elected president of Athens Female College, which position he filled till June, 1892, when, on account of failing health, he was compelled to resign. The following fall he asked his Conference for a superannuated relation, and sustained that relation at the time of his death, which occurred in Athens, Ala., April 4, 1894. On the 18th of March he completed his fortieth year of service to his Lord in the ministry, and on the morning of April 4 the Master said: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

CHARLES ELLIOTT MCGIBBONEY was born in Columbiana, Ala., April 9, 1857, and died at the parsonage in Pelham, Ala., May 20, 1894. He was reared by pious parents. His father was a minister of the gospel, who had him dedicated to God in holy baptism in infancy by Rev. Thomas Green, at Good Hope Church. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. S. P. West, at Broken Arrow, Ala., in July, 1884. In October of the same year he was licensed to preach the gospel by the Quarterly Conference of Coosa Valley Circuit, Rev. J. T. Morris, presiding elder. Brother McGibboney served God as a local preacher one year, and in November, 1885, he was admitted into the North Alabama Conference on trial, at Gadsden, Ala., and from there he was appointed to the Chandler Springs Mission. The next year he was appointed to the Abernathy Circuit. In November, 1887, he was ordained deacon at Tuscaloosa by Bishop J. C. Keener, and appointed to the Heflin Circuit, which he served two years. In November, 1889, he was ordained elder at Huntsville, Ala., by Bishop W. W. Duncan, and appointed to the Fern Bank Circuit, Jasper District, which he served two years. In November, 1891, he was appointed to the Pelham Circuit, Talladega District, which work he served up to the time of his death. On February 20, 1889, he was married to Miss Mattie A. Hearn, of Burwell, Carroll county, Ga. God blessed their union with three bright children. Little Ruth, the eldest, preceded her father to the glory world, and was doubtless watching and waiting to welcome him home. His body sleeps in the bounds of the Fern Bank Circuit, while the two bright little boys, Joe and John, are left with their bereaved mother. Brother McGibboney was a good man. To know him was to love him. As a preacher he was earnest, zealous, and faithful. As a brother he was courteous and manly; dutiful as a son, kind and loving in his family. He was a thoroughly consecrated Christian, and was never happier than when engaged in revival work. Few men or preachers more fully gained the confidence of the people, few wielded the influence over their congregation than he did. He was a man of sound judgment; a sweet, cheerful spirit; a clear, strong preacher; a man of great courage, true and faithful to God and his Church. His works were hard, and some of them difficult; but he did his work well, and left the deepest and most lasting impression upon the hearts and minds of the people he served. Brother McGibboney has gone, but we know where to find him. He died as he lived. O how sad for one so bright to fall in the midst of his usefulness! May the God that he worshiped prove a father to his fatherless children, and more than a husband to his widow. His aged father and mother are also left to mourn his loss, but they mourn not as those who have no hope.

ANDERSON G. COPELAND was born in White county, Tenn., October 8, 1826, and died at his home near Pratt City, Ala., November 20, 1894. He was converted when he was about eight years of age, and, in his own language, he had a conscious experience of the grace of God in his heart. He was licensed to preach when quite a youth, and was admitted on trial in the Tennessee Conference October, 1848; was ordained deacon by Bishop Capers October 27, 1850; and ordained elder by Bishop Andrew October 17, 1852. In the year 1855 he located and practiced physic for sixteen years, but did not lose sight of his holy calling, for he was a faithful and zealous local preacher. At Florence, Ala., in the year 1871, he joined the North Alabama Conference, and served the various charges to which he was assigned with great acceptability. About three years ago he was forced, by declining health, to take a superannuated relation. Dr. Copeland was a good man, decided in his convictions, firm in his decisions, prudent in conversation, and upright in deportment. With him religion was a divine principle enthroned in his heart, regulating his desires and disposition, and controlling his conduct. He was a true friend. He always had words of comfort and cheer for those in trouble or distress. His heart was full of sympathy and kindness. He was a good preacher, sound in doctrine, strong and convincing in logic, and full of earnestness and pathos. He was a successful preacher, and through his instrumentality many souls have been brought from darkness to light. He was a faithful pastor, visiting from house to house, doing his Master's work. He was diligent in instructing the children, and was much beloved by them. He was a devoted husband and father. In all the relations of life he was faithful. In death he was victorious. He lived in happy anticipation of a blissful immortality. He talked and sang and preached much about heaven.

NATHANIEL HENDERSON SELF was born in Jefferson county, Ala., October 25, 1828. When about nine years of age he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1846 he was licensed to exhort, and two years thereafter he was clothed with authority to preach. In the latter part of 1855 he was admitted on trial, and in due course, as provided by law, he was admitted into full connection in the Alabama Annual Conference. In the seven years immediately following his admission to the itinerant ministry he was in charge of the Jasper, Murphree's Valley, and Harpersville circuits. He then located, and for seventeen years he sustained the relation of a local preacher. For two years of that time he supplied circuits adjacent to his home. In the latter part of 1879 he was readmitted to the traveling connection by the North Alabama Annual Conference, and afterwards was in charge of Chandler's Springs Mission one year, Pelham Circuit three years, Pinckneyville Circuit two years, Mountain Mission one year, Oxanna Mission one year, and Elkmont Circuit one year, also Birmingham Circuit. At the session of the North Alabama Annual Conference held at Decatur, Ala., in 1891, he was given a superannuated relation. Through the remaining years of his life he resided at Wilsonville, Shelby county, Ala. He had a large family, and though not rich in worldly goods, he had a happy home. Brother Self was a man of integrity and stability, of pure life and of unblemished character, and he was ever devoted to the Church at whose altars he ministered. While he was not considered a man of great learning, he had a very thorough knowledge of the doctrines and polity of his Church, and he administered the ordinances of Christianity with great propriety. As a preacher he was sound in his doctrines, clear in his utterances, and systematic in the arrangement of his discourses, though he was considered dry in style and tedious in delivery. The hope entertained of his everlasting felicity is founded upon the fact that he was consecrated to God in childhood, professed to be regenerated by the Holy Spirit and justified by the divine act, and was true to his vows and adopted privileges through life. He gave no testimony in his last moments. He went hence without the ordeal of protracted illness. He was not allowed to linger upon the margin of the last river. He died of heart failure, at his home, November 19, 1894.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 18. Who are superannuated? Miles Foy, J. B. Bailey, G. E. Wyche, M. C. Thomas, N. A. Hooker, T. C. Lovin, J. B. Martin, W. S. Chaffin, T. B. Reeks, T. P. Ricand. 10.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Shockley D. Adams, David R. Bruton, Frank L. Reid, Joseph H. Wheeler. 4.

SHOCKLEY D. ADAMS, son of William and Elizabeth Gibson Adams, was born in Marlboro county, S. C., July 23, 1829. He was converted November 3, 1842, at Pine Grove, Bennettsville Circuit. South Carolina Conference, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church the same day—his father joining with him. He was appointed class leader June 24, 1846; licensed to exhort December 1, 1849; and licensed to preach October 26, 1850—Rev. William Barringer, presiding elder. Received on trial in the North Carolina Conference, at Louisburg, October, 1852; ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce at Pittsboro, November 5, 1854; and ordained elder by Bishop Early at Greensboro, November 16, 1856. He served the following fields of labor: Bladen Circuit, as junior preacher with Rev. J. B. Martin, preacher in charge, 1852; Deep River Circuit, 1853; Carthage Circuit, 1854-55; Mocksville Circuit, 1856; Davidson Circuit, 1857-58; Rockingham Circuit, 1859-60; Haw River Circuit, 1861-62; Carthage Circuit, 1863-64; Rockingham

Circuit, 1865-66; presiding elder of Fayetteville District, 1867-70; Washington District, 1871-73; Fayetteville District, 1874-75; Greensboro Station, 1876-78; Hillsboro District, 1879-80; Raleigh District, 1881-84; Fayetteville District, 1885-88; Greensboro District, 1889-90; Warrenton District, 1891 until his death in 1894. Thus fourteen years on circuits, three years on stations, and twenty-five years on districts give an unbroken service to the ministry of the Church of forty-two years. He was not well for two weeks before his death, and somewhat hindered in his work, but not confined to his bed all of any one day. He died of heart failure at brother Whitfield's, at Weldon, in the room which he had called his home on his district for three years past. As he approached the end he now and then made beautiful utterances. When informed by brother Troy that he was passing away, he said, "Tell Mary all is well, all is well!" To brother Troy he said, "Meet me in heaven!" After awhile brother Troy inquired, "Is Jesus with you?" He replied, "O yes; glory! glory!" Brother Troy asked, "Have you any message for the brethren of the Conference?" His response was, "All is well, all is well!" He then added, "Poor Mary, it will almost break her heart!" and in five minutes he was asleep in Jesus. He died at his post in Weldon, February 12, 1894. The friends there served him with loving-kindness. Since the year 1874 he has had a home in Carthage, N. C., where his beautiful life had been singularly helpful to all the interests of the community. Here he was buried February 14, 1894. The whole town was moved by one common sorrow at his death. Every place of business was closed, and the great throng which gathered and shared with tears in the funeral service declared how they loved him. Eleven of his brethren in the ministry from different parts of the Conference took part in the services. He was in the best sense a great man. All the elements of strength were so blended in him as to produce a well-balanced character. Large common sense, a sensitive yet intelligent conscience, a simple yet courageous faith, diligence in seeking the truth, wisdom to discern and walk in the right way, made his life a bright, cheerful, and increasingly helpful force to all who knew him. And to know him was to love him. He had the confidence of his Church. He served long and well as trustee in her schools—Greensboro, Trinity, Murfreesboro, and Littleton colleges. He was also chosen a member of committees and commissions when delicate and difficult work was to be done. He was a member of one or more sessions of the General Conference, the lawmaking body of his Church. He did his best at every point where he was called to serve. He was a good preacher; sound in doctrine, clear in statement, choice in language, instructive in matter and illustration, and on some occasions displayed great spiritual unction and power; the multitudes were moved to nobler purposes and holy lives through the power of the truths proclaimed. Who that heard his last sermon in Carthage, on the last day of the old year, can ever forget it? His personal piety was sweet, unostentatious, comforting, and often joyous. It was a keeping power which no troubles or labors or afflictions seemingly seriously affected. There was wonderful uniformity in spirit and life. He was ready when the end came, and went into a larger realm of communion with Him who loved and gave himself for him. He was twice married; the first time to Miss Martha Fletcher, of his native county, who was soon torn away from him; then to Miss Mary Jackson, of Carthage, who for thirty-eight years shared his toils, sorrows, and joys, and contributed her full share to his successful life. She and all his children survive him, and deeply lament his death. What a legacy he has left them in his beautiful life and triumphant death!

DAVID RASBURY BRUTON, youngest son of James and Diana Bruton, was born in Montgomery county, N. C., December 23, 1829; and died at Wilson, N. C., March 27, 1894. Early in life he gave his heart to God and connected himself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Soon afterwards he gave himself to the work of the Methodist ministry. In 1857, after his graduation at Trinity (then Normal) College, he applied for admission on trial in the North Carolina Conference, holding its session in the town of Goldsboro. At this Conference he was appointed to the presidency of the Raleigh Female Seminary. His ministerial life was a long and honorable one, as can be seen from the following list of appointments served by him: Raleigh Female Seminary, 1857-59; Wentworth Circuit, 1859-61; Madison Circuit, 1861-63; Thomasville and Lexington Circuit, 1864-65; Thomasville Station, 1865-67; President of Thomasville Female College, 1867-69; Davidson Circuit, 1869-70; Concord Station, 1870-74; Salisbury District, 1874-78; Greensboro Station, 1878-82; Warrenton District, 1882-84; Reidsville Station, 1884-86; supernumerary, 1886-88; Nashville Circuit, 1888-89; Bethel Circuit, 1889-90; superannuated, 1890-94. In 1858 he was married to Margaret G. Nixon, who died in 1865, leaving two children, who are now living—Col. John F. Bruton, of Wilson, N. C., and Miss Ella S. Bruton, of Wesleyan Female Institute. In 1869 he was married to Virginia Mauney, who died in 1889. The fruit of this union was four children, three of whom survive him—Mrs. E. W. Burt, Helen and David Bruton. Brother Bruton's ministry was a long and honorable one, covering more than one-third of a century. As circuit rider, stationed pastor, presiding elder, and college president he ran almost the whole gamut of ministerial experience. This fact shows the worth and influence of the man in his day and generation. He was, in fact, one of our most useful and influential men. In his prime he did much to impress his character upon the important plans and enterprises of North Carolina Methodism. His mind was acute, his thought clear and striking; he was a man of true culture, which was manifested in his general bearing and preaching power. It can be truthfully said that as a preacher he was above the ordinary. His preaching was characterized by strength rather than brilliancy; yet at times he was both brilliant and strong. He was especially pointed and powerful in the denunciation of sin. Brother Bruton's most popular work was done perhaps when he was pastor at Concord Station and presiding elder of the Salisbury District; yet his best work was done in the country, away from the noisy towns, where he met large congregations hungry for the bread of life; where he could inhale the sweet breath of the hills and hear the voice of nature echoed in the song of bird and moan of forest. Here he seemed to get nearer to God, and preached with melting tenderness and apostolic zeal. His preaching was truly evangelical, and through the Holy Spirit brought many wanderers into the fold. Perhaps the richest tribute is paid to his character when it is said that he was a man of heart. We have not many of whom this can be said. The learned author of the "Tongue of Fire" has said with beauty and force: "The heart commands the man. Give me a heart and you give me a man." According to this, brother Bruton was a man—a man such as we need and such as God loves. He had a heart tender and true, pure and Christlike. This tender part of his nature made him a loving husband and father, and riveted to him the deepest affections of his family; it made him a welcome one in the social circle; it enlisted the affections of the poor and unfortunate; it made him the special friend of young men. No young preacher had any fear in preaching to a congregation in which brother Bruton sat. The benignant, sympathetic look, the hearty amen, bade every timid fear begone. There are in North Carolina to-day numbers of men, prominent in Church and state, who, to a great extent, owe what they are to the interest brother Bruton took in them when they were young men. He never altogether ceased from preaching, even did much effective work in the superannuated relation. It is a cheering thought that on the Sabbath preceding his death—that bleak, wintry Sabbath, when nature seemed disorganized, distracted—this man of God stood in the pulpit at Fremont and told the "old, old story of Jesus and his love." As he grew older his spiritual experience grew richer.

He enjoyed with increasing relish the presence of his Master. Though worn down with disease and harassed by misfortune, his spirit never murmured and his faith never weakened. In one of the last letters written to his son, Col. J. F. Bruton, he said: "I have placed my hand in His; and although everything appears dark, I am trusting implicitly." No one could doubt that brother Bruton enjoyed his religion. He returned from Fremont March 26. Before retiring on Monday night his conversation was about Jesus. He was ripening for heaven. Though the wheat had been beaten and torn in many a storm, yet the golden color deepened in the harvest days, and it was a rich sheaf that the angels bore away in the twilight of that Tuesday morning. On the following Wednesday afternoon his body was laid down in quiet Maplewood cemetery. David Rasbury Bruton, with unstained shield and unrusty sword, has answered his Captain's call. What a rich legacy descends to every younger soldier in the memory of the old soldier and hero!

FRANK LEWIS REID was born in Rockingham county, N. C., June 16, 1851; and died in Greensboro, N. C., September 24, 1894, in the forty-fourth year of his age. He was the son of Rev. N. F. Reid, D.D., and the grandson of Rev. James Reid, whose names are illustrious in the annals of North Carolina Methodism. While yet young in years he entered school at Trinity College, and at the age of nineteen graduated from that institution. In young manhood's beginning he laid his heart upon God's altar and became a member of the Church of his fathers. He soon became impressed that he was divinely called to the work of the ministry, and for some months was much exercised on this subject. He did not hastily enter the work, but pondered well the solemn responsibilities of the sacred calling, and it was not until he was thoroughly convinced of his call that he consented to enter the work. Having once settled the matter he obeyed the call with all his heart, and gave himself fully to the work of the itinerant ministry. He was received on trial into the North Carolina Conference in Greensboro, N. C., in the year 1870, and was sent to the Madison Circuit, where he remained three years. During his pastorate there his labors were greatly blessed. All around the circuit the revival fires burned and glowed, and the people flocked to hear the young and gifted preacher. He threw his whole soul into the work as he preached and talked and labored, and many were the souls born to God under his ministry. It was during his pastorate on the Madison Circuit that he was happily married on June 3, 1873, to Miss Minnie E. Cardwell, of Rockingham county, who, through all the years of his life thereafter, with a beautiful devotion, shared his joys and sorrows. From this marriage were born four children, all of whom, with his wife, three brothers, and three sisters, survive him. No man loved his family with a tenderer and more considerate affection than did our dear departed brother. At the Conference of 1873 brother Reid was appointed to Louisburg Station, which charge he served for four years with distinguished success. While here, in addition to the work of the pastorate, he was called to the presidency of Louisburg Female College, which position he filled with fidelity and ability until he resigned in 1878. It was about this time that, on account of failing health and a chronic throat affection, he was compelled to desist from regular preaching. This was a great cross to him. He was sorely chastened, but with the humility and trust of a little child he meekly accepted his affliction, committed himself into the Heavenly Father's hand, and waited for the divine providence to open up a way for him to labor in the vineyard of his Lord. That way was in due time opened when he and Rev. W. S. Black, D.D., became editors and proprietors of the Raleigh Christian Advocate. Having bought Dr. Black's interest, December, 1884, he remained the sole owner and manager, and the editor in chief of the Advocate. From the time he entered upon his labors as editor until he resigned to prosecute the work in which he died, his labors and zeal knew no abatement. A large portion of the time he did the work of two men, and amid bodily weakness and labors abundant and frequent discouragements he toiled on uncomplainingly through the years, almost giving his life for the work that lay so near his heart. His efforts were largely blessed, and he was permitted to see the work to which he felt providentially called prosper in his hands. No one can estimate how great a blessing brother Reid has been to North Carolina Methodism through the weekly visits of the Advocate. While engaged in his arduous work as editor he served the Church and his generation in various other departments of labor. Owing to his fine business tact and skill he was at different times called to give the benefit of his valuable labors in important and responsible civil positions; and whenever and wherever he served he showed himself a man of affairs, and won the admiration of all concerned as a faithful and efficient public servant. Upon the death of Rev. A. A. Boshamer, in October, 1881, he was appointed to succeed him as pastor of Edenton-street Church, in Raleigh, where the name of brother Reid continues unto this day as ointment poured forth. He was appointed presiding elder of the Raleigh District upon the death of Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, D.D., in May, 1888, and it was on account of overwork in this extra charge that he came near dying during the same year. He received the degree of A.B. at Trinity College in 1870, and of the same college in 1873 the degree of A.M.; and the honorary degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by the University of North Carolina in 1890. In May, 1890, he was a delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held at St. Louis; and he was also a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, held at Washington, D. C., October, 1891. Toward the middle of the year 1893 a new sphere of usefulness seemed to open up to him when he was urgently called to the presidency of Greensboro Female College. Exercising his usual caution, he did not hastily accept the call, but after much prayer and counsel with his brethren he decided to accept the position, and immediately entered upon his new and responsible work with the same energy, enthusiasm, and skill that had characterized him in every sphere of duty in which he had ever served. The universal acclamation was that he was pre-eminently the man for the place; and with his heart all aglow with zeal for the prosperity of Greensboro Female College and for the cause of Christian education in general, and especially in the families of his own beloved Methodism in North Carolina, he opened a vigorous campaign, which had already begun to wake up the people on the subject of Christian and denominational education. With convincing logic, earnest persuasion, and burning eloquence he pressed his theme and won his way to the hearts of his hearers; and wherever his voice was heard converts were won to the cause he espoused. Under his successful leadership Greensboro Female College fast rose to an era of prosperity that has gladdened the hearts of its friends throughout the state. The results of his plans and labors, in the improvements in the building, increased patronage and general confidence in the character and success of the institution, evidence the wisdom of the directors in placing him in this delicate and responsible position, which he served so well. His work for Greensboro Female College will abide while he sweetly rests. He was devotedly attached to Trinity College—his alma mater—and labored every way, as trustee and friend, to advance its interests. At the request of the trustees he raised several thousand dollars to equip the new buildings at Durham. He was a member of the board of trustees until the last session of the North Carolina Conference. Few men have done so much valuable work in so short a time as he. He was suddenly called from labor to rest, but he was found standing bravely at his post and ready for the summons. North Carolina Methodism mourns for her distinguished son. It is hard for us to realize that we shall never hear his voice again, nor again see the light kindle in his eye; and while we bow our hearts in chastened sorrow and reverent submission to the high and holy One, we thank God for the noble, manly, Christian life of Frank L. Reid; for his career of usefulness, and the works that do follow him.

JOSEPH HALSTEAD WHEELER, an honored superannuated member of this Conference, fell asleep in Christ at the home of his son-in-law, Maj. Hall T. McGee, in the city of Charleston, S. C., on November 27, 1894, at the ripe age of eighty-five years. He was a native of the state of New Jersey, having been born in the city of Newark in 1810. He removed to Charleston, S. C., when fourteen years of age, and was ever afterwards devoted to all the interests that made for the happiness of his adopted state. At the age of twenty-three, while residing in Camden, he felt called of God to the work of the ministry; and although at the time successfully engaged in worldly business, he gave it all up to engage in the work of leading men to Christ, and the people of God to the land of which the Lord hath said, "I will give it unto thee." He joined the South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1834, and for seventeen years was an active, zealous member of that Conference. As a young man he was said to have been pure in thought, careful of his words, and of spotless integrity of character. His zeal for God and the Church found expression in a somewhat stereotyped phrase, which father Wheeler was known to use throughout his whole life, "If the religion of Christ is true at all, it is tremendously true;" and his life was a glad acknowledgment of this fact. In 1851 a portion of the territory lying within the bounds of North Carolina and belonging to the South Carolina Conference was transferred to the North Carolina Conference; and brother Wheeler, being stationed in Fayetteville at the time, came with the territory. He was returned the next year to Fayetteville; and such was the wounded feeling of a large part of the church, on account of the transfer, that his second reception as their pastor was not marked with any special manifestations of graciousness. But the saintly character of brother Wheeler, his sweet spirit and Christ-like devotion to his work, went far toward mollifying the wound and winning back the church to a higher plane of spirit and life. Before his transfer he filled such stations as Columbia and Spartanburg, and was for many years the secretary of the South Carolina Conference. In the North Carolina Conference he filled such places as Fayetteville, Raleigh, Wilmington, Wadesboro, Beaufort, and many others. Brother Wheeler was meek and lowly in heart, and had no self-seeking or wordly ambition. He was a Methodist from principle, and in love and faith preached the doctrines of his Church. He was too wise to suppose that a mere moral reformation, however sincere, could take the place of a heartfelt conversion to God and witness of the Spirit, or that a life hid with Christ in God could be substituted by a mere humanitarianism. He literally hid behind the cross while he went about doing good. The cross of Christ was the great central truth of his preaching, and he held it up as the only leverage that could lift a soul from sin and death to heaven and God. In 1883 he was placed in that honored rank of retired field marshals of the army of the living God, the superannuated preachers. He made his home in Charleston, S. C., with his daughter Anna, the wife of Maj. Hall T. McGee. His ministrations were most acceptable to the people of God among the different churches in Charleston; and when too feeble to preach he took his seat within the chancel, where even his presence was a benediction. He had three sons in the ministry, two of whom, Joseph and William, preceded him to the better land; the other, James W., is a member of the Western North Carolina Conference. He had only two daughters, the one mentioned above and Hattie N.; the latter, together with two other sons, Warren and Charles, are also waiting to greet their beloved father upon the eternal shore. The living have a goodly heritage in their father's teaching and godly example; and in the hour of trouble and disappointment and tears can solace their aching hearts with the recollection that their glorified father's name was without a single stain, and that when life's fitful fever is over they may meet him where the inhabitants never say "I am sick," and where they never grow old. It would not be difficult for a master to give a mental analysis of brother Wheeler. He was philosophical rather than logical; and this, combined with the poetic and emotional, made his preaching pathetic. He scarcely ever failed to move at least some in his audience to tears. To this may be added the scripturalness of his propositions, while the copious quotations which he gave from the sacred record made him eminently a gospel preacher. His style was plain and perspicuous. There was nothing showy or meretricious in his delivery, and he impressed every hearer with the important fact that the preacher was intensely in earnest. His religious thought in the sphere of the experimental had a wide range. He fairly glowed with a consciousness of pardon and regeneration through the blood of the Lord Jesus, and as he ascended in experience the religious horizon widened; the altitude made it possible for his spiritual ladder to touch heaven, while ministering angels assisted him to sing his favorite hymn, "O glorious hope of perfect love!" Brother Wheeler was pious without any of the meretriciousness of pietism, and was remarkably free from any pharisaic sanctimoniousness. None knew him but to love him, and his unimpeachable character inspired universal confidence. The Conference was much stirred when his death was announced upon the Conference floor. He has answered to the last roll-call on earth, and is already known by his new name in the company of the redeemed and sanctified. The righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance. Brother Wheeler was happily married to Mrs. Anne Warren, of Camden, S. C., in 1831, and for fifty years she was truly his helpmeet. She preceded her husband to the glory-land about thirteen years, dying in Hillsboro, N. C., in 1881. Owing to a paralysis of the throat brother Wheeler, during his last days, could speak but little, and scarcely enough to be understood by the loved ones who knew him best and loved him most. But last words are not necessary from one whose whole life was a constant triumph; and though dead, he yet speaketh.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

WILLIAM D. ANDERSON was born at Marietta, Ga., June 24, 1839. He was the son of George D. and Jane Holmes Anderson. His father was a judge of the superior court at the time of his sudden and unexpected death. His mother was a woman of high Christian type. So he inherited good blood and fine brain power from both his parents. He possessed from the start a quick and inquisitive mind. His educational facilities were good. He graduated with distinction at the Georgia University in 1859. Applying himself at once to the study and practice of law, he soon won honorable rank at the bar of his native town. But soon the alarm of war was heard along the southern coast. Fearing that the battle might be over before he should have opportunity to try his "prentice hand," he, together with four others, hurried away to Charleston, where he entered as a private the Palmetto Guards, of the second South Carolina regiment. Soon after, his command was transferred to Virginia, where he acted a gallant part in many battles now famous in history—Bull Run, first and second battles of Manassas, Yorktown, Millersburg, seven days around Richmond, Cold Harbor, Mechanicsville, Gaines's Mill, Savage Station, Fair Oaks, Frazier's Farm, Malvern Hill, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Boonesboro, Harper's Ferry, Sharpsburg, and Gettysburg. At the battle of Cold Harbor he received a wound in his right hand which he carried with him to the grave. At the close of his first year he was transferred to Phillips's Legion, and elected first lieutenant of his company, which he often commanded as captain. At the close of the war he returned to the practice of his profession at Marietta. He married, in April, 1865, Miss Louise J. Latimer, of South Carolina. His wife was a most excellent Christian woman. To her godly life and pious example he was indebted more perhaps than to all other human sources for his conviction, conversion, and subsequent career of usefulness in the Church. Her death, which occurred in 1875, was a crushing blow to him; but was, maybe, under God, the key to all his after history. In 1877, one year after entering the active ministry, he married Miss Lula H. Latimer, youngest sister of his first wife. By these marriages he left nine children—two by his first wife, fine young men and full of promise to Church and state. He joined the Church in 1867, under the ministry of the Rev. W. F. Cook. As might have been expected of one of his firm, earnest nature, he served the Church wisely and well, filling very acceptably the offices of trustee, steward, and Sunday-school superintendent. While in private civil life he never sought after office, yet his fellow-citizens, noticing his integrity and fitness for positions of trust and responsibility, honored him frequently by electing him to the legislature of the state; and for four consecutive terms he was elected to preside as speaker pro tem. over the deliberations of that body. The second year of his fourth term in this honorable position he resigned his seat and knocked at the door of the North Georgia Conference as a candidate for "admission on trial." His friends and admirers at home and abroad—he had hosts of them—were astounded at the step he was taking, which some of them characterized as the "climax of folly." But "none of these things" moved him. His mind was made up. He was appointed to and served the following charges: Eatonton, 1876; Cedartown, 1877-78; Marietta, 1879-80; Elberton District, 1881-82; First Church, Rome, 1883; Marietta District, 1884-86; First Church, Athens, 1887-90; First Church, Atlanta, 1891; First Church, La Grange, 1892; Oxford District, 1893-94. Here his life work ends. Who shall estimate the value of such a life? A life full of good deeds done by the "right hand" which the "left hand never knew." Who shall gather the "bread" he "cast upon the waters?" Who shall garner the harvest grown from gospel seed which he sowed upon valleys and hillsides wherever he went? After making his first round for the new year upon the Oxford District, a district of twenty appointments, in the space of five weeks—a task to test the toughest muscle and most robust health—he returned to his home in Marietta to fold his hands and enter into sweet rest. His last illness was severe and brief; but in the delirium of disease his mind seemed absorbed in his loved employ, the "ruling passion strong in death." He preached, prayed, sang, and counseled the brethren of his Quarterly Conferences as if they were present before him. The day before he died his delirium left him and he became fully conscious. He said to his brother-in-law, who stood at his bedside: "Pierce, what do they say is the matter with me?" Pierce answered: "A very severe cold, with pneumonia tendency." "Well," said he, "I know I am a very sick man; every inch of me from head to feet feels sick." Soon after he fell into a profound slumber and awoke no more. About 6 o'clock, February 19, without a struggle or groan, he sank into the arms of death. He left no dying testimony. None was needed. His pure, noble, consecrated life was enough. As to how he was loved by the ministry and laity, the multitudes who attended his obsequies abundantly testify. Dr. Anderson as a friend was frank and faithful; as a father, firm, yet considerate; as a husband, loving and tender; as a Christian and minister, zealous and true. In short, as to all the elements of a noble manhood, he stood out among his fellows the peer of the noblest and the best. Endowed with fine native gifts, polished by the culture of the schools, broadened and well drilled by reading and study, he forged steadily forward till he stood in the front rank of the ministry of his Church. His ability and personal popularity are attested by the official honors his brethren bestowed upon him: secretary and treasurer of the Aid Society, president of the legal Conference, chairman of the board of managers of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, trustee of Emory College and of the Wesleyan and La Grange Female Colleges, also of the Young Harris Institute.

thrice elected a delegate to the General Conference, honored with the title of D.D. by the trustees of Emory College. Enough surely to gratify ambition, if ambition he had; but he had none in the sense of desire for mere honor's sake. He rather shunned than sought the distinctions men confer. If he had aspiration it was to know the truth; not for himself alone, but that through his knowledge of it he might make the pathway to heaven luminous and attractive to others. But self-respecting as he was, he was modest and diffident as to his own worth and ability; and he has died and passed away without knowing in what high regard he was held by his brethren and the Church at large. His death leaves a blank hard to fill; but still God knows what is best. "The workmen die, but the work goes on."

NOAH HAMPTON PALMER was born January 10, 1817, in Buncombe county, N. C., about twenty miles west of Asheville. His parents were John and Sallie Palmer, of German and French descent, respectively. In early life he was apprenticed to a hatter and served until he was twenty-one years of age. His first independent act was to join the United States forces and assist in removing the Cherokee Indians from this country. In 1839 he taught his first school in Lumpkin county, Ga., receiving $39 for his three months' work. The next ten years were passed principally in teaching school. He united with the Methodist Church in 1843; embraced religion in 1845, but, to use his words, "not feeling satisfied about it," did not profess until the spring of 1846. When called to preach he was teaching school at Cartecay, Gilmer county, Ga. He was licensed in October, 1852. He entered the Georgia Conference in the winter of 1853-54, and was sent to Darien, Ga. He could not stand the climate, and after a short time went to Ducktown, Tenn., and spent the rest of the year in teaching school and assisting Tyre B. Harbin on the state-line mission work. In 1855 he served the Athens Mission, under Rev. J. S. Key, and was returned to the same work in 1856. He served Broad River Circuit in 1857, and Clarkesville in 1858. During this year he was married to Miss Julia C. Littlejohn. He served Zebulon Circuit in 1859. Here his health failed, and at the Conference of 1859-60 he was located at his own request. In 1864 he reentered the Conference, and was again appointed to Clarkesville. His health again broke down, and he was located until the year 1871, when he again entered the Conference. He was appointed to the Cumming Circuit for 1872, and Spring Place in 1873. At the close of this year he was superannuated, and remained so the rest of his life, except the year 1882, when he was made effective and appointed to the Tunnel Hill Circuit. After about three months he broke down completely and retired. He died February 1, 1894. His last words were, "Salvation! Salvation!" He died happy.

JOHN R. PARKER sprang from one of the best Georgia families. He was born in 1838, and brought up on Shoal Creek, Franklin county. The family connection was very large, and nearly all Methodists. He was converted in boyhood, and developed with his physical growth a symmetrical and beautiful type of young Christian manhood. In 1860 he joined the Georgia Conference, and was most actively effective to the time of his death, a period of thirty-four years. Brother Parker was remarkable for great practicality of mind, clear insight of everyday questions. When matters involving a high order of masterly common sense and conscientious painstaking were to be settled, he was in great demand by his Conference. To say that he was most deeply conscientious in every detail of duty, public and private, expresses very poorly the sense of responsibility to God and his fellow-man which he ever exhibited. As a preacher he was didactic, earnest, and instructive. He did not usually manifest the magnetic emotion of many of his brethren in the ministry, but at times rose in the strength of the Holy Spirit to mighty forcefulness and sweeping power. The life behind his preaching made it rarely effective wherever he was best known. He was a most gifted and devoted pastor. He became identified with all the interests of the people among whom he labored, and they sought his wise counsels and sympathies freely in temporal and spiritual perplexities. His devotion to the Church was unwavering, persistent, sublime. For many years he was prominently identified with the Conference Board of Missions, where he rendered signal service to this great cause. It was at the close of the work of the board in Atlanta last May that he decided to visit his mother's grave before returning home. Gathering a bouquet of choicest flowers, perhaps the varieties she especially loved, he traveled many miles to lay them upon her sacred tomb. He spent the night with his sister living near, and when her cheery voice called for him lovingly the next morning to get ready for breakfast, it was found that he had gone. His Master's chariot, which bore Elijah aloft, passing in the night watches, he stepped in with his Lord and was borne in triumph to the home of love and glory. While hallowed memories of "lang syne" were trooping in upon his waking and sleeping moments, may we not believe that she whose grave he was visiting drew near, and was first in the cortege of bright spirits to welcome him into "everlasting habitations?" May we all triumph so. His Conference history is as follows: Admitted in 1860 at Augusta, he was appointed as junior for 1861 to Watkinsville; 1862, Ringgold; 1863-65, in the Confederate army; 1866-67, Canton; 1868-69, Gainesville; 1870-71, Clarksville; 1872-74, Jefferson; 1875-77, presiding elder Gainesville District; 1878, Warrenton; 1879-81, Asbury; 1882-83, Harmony Grove; 1884-85, Elberton; 1886-87, Forsyth; 1888-89, Grantville; 1890-91, West Point; 1892, Carrollton; 1893-94, Greenville and Trinity.

JEPHTHA H. DANIEL was born in Heard county, Ga., December 18, 1853, and joined the Church in 1870 at Bowden, Ga., graduating from the college there the same year. He then entered college at Oxford, where he was licensed to preach. He subsequently took a post-graduate course at Vanderbilt University, and was married shortly afterwards to Miss Emmie McDowell. He was admitted to the North Georgia Conference in 1878, and served the following works: 1879, Franklin Circuit; 1880-81, principal of high school, Franklin; 1882, Fairburn Circuit; 1883, Meriwether Circuit; 1884, Franklin Institute; 1885, Heard Circuit; and in 1886 was located at his own request because of failing health. He was readmitted at Washington and appointed for 1891 to Hillsboro Circuit; 1892-93, Newborne Circuit; and was made supernumerary in 1894. In all his relations in life and his dealings with men he displayed the highest Christian rectitude and love for all men. Old and young members of his own denomination and of others, among whom he had passed his childhood and youth, join in attesting the purity of his character and the nobility of his spirit. His partial relief from the active duty of the ministry was due to feeble health, and to the purpose to regain if possible his wonted vigor, and the better to fit himself for the work he loved so well. From the death of such a man we gather the sweetest lessons of life. May the purity of his example, his devotion to his Master, his love for men, be lessons to those who knew and loved him, and ripen into a blessed fruition.

WALTER RICHARDSON BRANHAM was born in Eatonton, Ga., November 18, 1813, and left this world from his home at Oxford, Ga., September 2, 1894. He was licensed to preach in October, 1836, by Rev. W. J. Parks, of blessed memory, and in December of the same year was admitted on trial into the Georgia Conference. He served the following works: 1837, Watkinsville; 1838, Augusta; 1839, Clinton and Monticello; 1840-41, Milledgeville; 1842, Athens and Lexington; 1843, Lawrenceville; 1844, Madison; 1845-46, Eatonton; 1847-48, Vineville; 1849, Macon; 1850-51, Savannah; 1852, professor in Wesleyan Female College; 1855-56, Covington and Oxford; 1857-59, Atlanta District; 1860-63, Griffin District; 1864-65, Atlanta District; 1866-68, Athens District; 1869-70, Griffin District; 1871, Washington; 1872-74, Oxford and Social Circle; 1875, Covington and Mt. Pleasant; 1876, Covington; 1877-78, Social Circle; 1879, Jackson; 1880-81, Oxford; 1882, Atlanta City Mission. At the Conference of 1882 he was superannuated, and thus, after more than forty years of active work, gracefully retired, carrying with him the love and reverence of his brethren. Perhaps no man who has labored among us possessed a more unique and striking personality than did Walter R. Branham. His early life was passed amid such surroundings as wealth and high social position could give him, and his traits of character made him the friend and chosen intimate of the most noted men of his day in Church and state. He embraced religion and united with the Church while a student in Franklin College, now the University of Georgia, and ever afterwards maintained with singular fidelity and earnestness the purposes and aims of his consecrated young manhood. The devoutness and benignity of his nature won for him among his brethren the title of the "St. John of the Conference," and the sweetness and gentleness of his spirit rested as a benediction on every company of which he was a member. Naturally timid, almost shy, he yet had the courage that comes from profound religious conviction, and there were times when he spake the messages of the gospel with an unction and power little short of inspiration. His reluctance to appear in any public capacity was the result of a modest estimate of his own ability, and his shrinking from the gaze of men was more than compensated by the constancy of his communion with God. He made no claims to great knowledge of divine mysteries, but his spiritual insight into the deep things of God surpassed that of most men, and his instinct of spiritual truth made him a counselor and guide of unspeakable skill to his less gifted brethren. So absorbed and saturated were his mind and heart with the truth of the gospel that conversation in which he bore a part seemed naturally and inevitably to take a spiritual turn. Unconsciously to himself perhaps, or so adroitly that the listener could never detect the art, he managed to use every occasion of friendly intercourse to let fall some priceless seed of truth and inspire in his hearers some holy and worthy purpose of living. The atmosphere of his life was one of consecration. To him, simply and truly, to live was Christ and to die was gain. A life so gentle, so pure, so full of love for others, so like his Master's in his efforts to save men, had its fitting close. The weary wheels stood still; the tired body slept; the saintly spirit passed into its home.

MILES W. ARNOLD was born in Putnam county, Ga., October 10, 1829, and died in Monroe, Walton county, October 5, 1894, and was buried at Norwood October 7. He lacked only five days of living sixty-five years in this world. He joined the Georgia Conference in 1852, and so was an itinerant preacher forty-two years. In 1854, his second year in the Conference, he served the Carrollton Circuit. Here he was married to Miss Maggie J. Buskin, who became the mother of his seven children, five of whom with their mother preceded him to the better land. He was married a second time, in 1875, to Mrs. Elizabeth Novell, of Monroe, who was Miss Briscoe, and who survives him. He was an effective itinerant for nearly forty years, during which time he received hundreds, and likely thousands, of people into the Church. Much of the time the saving of souls was a passion with him. He was a revivalist, and was never so happy as when in a good meeting. He was so occupied with the work of the ministry, and for so long, that he was largely disqualified for anything else. He was a man of one business. He was a strong preacher, a powerful exhorter, and a poet of no mean ability. He was a strong defender of and advocate for the doctrines of the Church. Whatever mistakes he made were due to his intense opposition to everything he believed to be wrong. Even his opponents believed him to be sincere. He was a pure man. One who was with him much says he never heard a word pass his lips that might not with the utmost propriety have been uttered anywhere. He suffered wrong, but it did not diminish his love for and fidelity to the Church. Such characters are not developed in a day, nor are they found everywhere; and the world is the poorer when they are transferred to the Church above.

GEORGE T. KING was born near Brown's Bridge, Forsyth county, Ga., April 18, 1846. His father was an exhorter in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. George spent his boyhood in attending school and assisting his father in his mechanical pursuits. He united with the Church at an early age, but was not converted till some time afterwards. His conversion was genuine, scriptural, enabling him to cry, "Abba, Father, my Lord and my God!" In referring to his conversion ever afterwards he was wont to say: "My conversion to God I have always considered the unit of my life; I did not really begin to live till then." At the age of sixteen he entered the Confederate service, and did faithful duty as a soldier in the western army. At Jonesboro, about the time of the fall of Atlanta, he received a wound, from the effects of which he never fully recovered. With large, stalwart form, his early death may have been the harvest of that battle's sowings. In camp life he was noted for orderly, consistent deportment, never engaging in card-playing, dram-drinking, and pastimes common with many others, but employing his time, when off active duty, in reading and religious meditation. He spent the years 1868-69 as a student at

Emory College, but he did not graduate. While at college he applied himself closely to study and made considerable proficiency, especially in mathematics, for which science he had a natural bent and great fondness. He was licensed to preach at Walesca, Ga., September 17, 1870—Rev. W. T. Caldwell, presiding elder. He soon made proof of his ministry as "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." On November 23, 1870, he was happily married to Miss Martha E. Allen, of Forsyth county, Ga. After marriage he settled at Jasper, Pickens county, Ga.; where he continued to reside, with the exception of two or three years, until he joined the Conference. At the Conference held at Gainesville, December, 1877, he was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce. He was admitted on trial into the traveling connection at Dalton, November, 1883, and was appointed to serve the following charges: Subigna, 1884-85; Dalton Circuit, 1886; Homer, 1887-88; Bowman, 1889-90; Hartwell, 1891; Jefferson, 1892-94. Here, near midnight on November 1, 1894, after a lingering and painful illness, the life of this highly useful man of God ended—rather, bloomed into life immortal. Of large frame physically, of strong native as well as acquired gifts, he moved about a giant, but unconscious of the fact that he possessed a giant's strength. Simple as a child, modest as a woman, shrinking as the sensitive plant, he never seemed to realize his own true power, never seemed to have any conception of the heights of useful position and preferment to which he might attain. Diffidence and distrust of his talents and qualifications cramped and confined his fine gifts to the ordinary orbits of ministerial life. Possessed of a strong, incisive, analytical mind, he seized readily upon the strong points of any text he might select for pulpit discussion, and, passing them through the forge of his own brain, fashioned them into thoughts glowing and burning, to be delivered to delighted audiences. With a brain well stored with information gathered from the reading and study of books of our best authors, he was equipped for the discussion of the mooted questions of the day before cultured congregations. None who waited upon his ministry went away uninstructed. From the very beginning of his ministry as a local preacher he drew good congregations. When he went forth to call together and feed his Lord's sheep he carried along a gospel basket full to the brim of wholesome, appetizing food; hence no complaint of the want of auditors. "The common people heard him gladly." With a little more self-assertion and less of diffidence—retiring modesty—he had the native and acquired ability to take rank with the foremost of his brethren. The same shrinking, timid spirit put him at a discount in pastoral work. He shrank as far as possible from public observation, and it was difficult to get him to preach on what are regarded as extraordinary occasions, except when forced by circumstances; but when so placed, he measured fully up to—often surpassing—public expectation. His only son writes: "His mind was clear to the last; his sufferings were so intense that he talked but little. He was hopeful that he would recover, so he might do more work; but he was perfectly willing to die if such was God's will; said if it was his will, 'the dying hour will be the happiest of my life.'" A good man, and in many respects a great man, has fallen. His body "rests in hope" beside his loved wife in the cemetery at Jasper, Ga.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except those of William Murdock, withdrawn, and S. Leake, reprimanded for grave imprudence.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? E. H. Moon, O. N. Koon. 2.

EDWIN HAYDEN MOON, son of William and Nancy Moon, was born in Monroe county, Miss., July 7, 1849. Educated at Andrew College, Tennessee; converted at Rome, Okolona Circuit; licensed to preach, October 4, 1868; admitted on trial at Water Valley, 1870; received into full connection and ordained deacon at Corinth, 1872, by Bishop Kavanaugh; ordained elder at Aberdeen, 1874, by Bishop Doggett. He filled the following appointments: Baldwin Circuit, 1871; Pontotoc Circuit, 1872; West Point Station, 1873; Pontotoc Circuit, 1874; Starkville Station, 1875; Baldwin Circuit, 1876; Winona and Carrollton, 1877; Starkville Station, 1878; supernumerary, 1879; Byhalia Station, 1880; Greenville Station, 1881-82; Macon Station, 1883; Holly Springs Station, 1884-87; Como and Fredonia, 1888; transferred to North Alabama, where he served Florence and Elyton stations; returned in 1890; Hebron Circuit, 1891; Tupelo Station, 1892 until his death, January 29, 1894. Brother Moon was happily married to Miss Florence Peters, of Columbus, Miss., November 21, 1875. She and her two children mourn the loss of a devoted husband and loving father. Having been soundly converted to God, he started with conscientious convictions in building Christian character, and in this he made no mistake, as was demonstrated in after life. Truly he was "an epistle, known and read of all men." There were hidden forces in brother Moon which drew the young and old to him as with hooks of steel. He did not take things by storm, but carefully and prayerfully besieged the fortress of the enemy, laying well his premises and conscientiously drawing his conclusions at the forfeiture of every earthly good. As the years have come and gone he has answered to roll-call, and gone at the bidding of our chief shepherds; it mattered not where, he was loyal to his Church as well as to his God. For twenty-three years he has gone in and out before us; and O, how we learned to love him! We loved him for his uniform kindness to all men, and then for the pure, tender, spiritual tie that drew us to him as his brethren in the ministry. He was what might be called a timid man, always appearing so, often in the fact of caring for the feelings of others. Though timid and modest, and as gentle as a mother, yet when moved by divine impulses he was bold and decided. He did not compromise with sin, but would "swear to his own hurt." The prosperity of the Church was his chief aim in life, and the bleeding of Zion touched a responsive chord in his devoted heart. As a preacher he was systematic, chaste, and strong, always bringing to his aid the best authors, as his well-selected library indicates. The Bible was the book of all others with him. As his spiritual perceptions went down into its solid truths his soul feasted on the hidden treasures. At last that self-same gospel that gave him such comfort, and that he had preached for over twenty years, supported his sinking heart in the throes of expiring nature. His disease was muscular rheumatism, causing intense suffering, though not considered dangerous until a few hours before his death. He talked much about dying, wishing to live for his wife and children, but saying he was not afraid to die, and so was ready when the summons came. The Christian gentleman, the faithful soldier is no more; his musical voice is hushed on earth forever.

O. N. Koon was born in 1852. He joined the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen, in 1884, and was appointed to the Marietta Circuit; 1885, to the Baldwin Circuit; 1886, to the New Albany Circuit; 1887, to the Ripley Circuit, where he remained for four years, accomplishing great good in the name of the Master; 1891, to the Cornersville Circuit, doing a good work for two years, and was returned and began the third year with bright prospects for a successful year. But alas! on February 5, 1894, he was violently attacked with pneumonia, from which he suffered until the 14th, when the Master said, "It is enough; come up higher." Brother Koon was more than an ordinary preacher. He had no early advantages. His mother died when he was an infant, and he was left in poverty to be cared for by his father, who was not a member of the Church. Notwithstanding the unfavorable circumstances surrounding his early life he was a strong, energetic, and faithful minister of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. In addition to his extraordinary gifts as a revivalist, he understood the doctrines of the Methodist Church, and was able to defend them. When he came to cross the last river he realized that the blessed gospel he had preached to others was able to sustain him. Death found him at his post. In great peace he passed over the river to meet his reward.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? George T. Nichols, Archibald C. McDougal, J. C. Randall. 3.

GEORGE T. NICHOLS was born in Dickson county, Tenn., January 22, 1847. He was the sixth child in a family of nine boys and five girls. His father was a successful farmer and a large slave-owner. In 1864 he was assassinated by unknown parties, and the last few months of the war witnessed the destruction of all the property, houses burned, negroes fled, and the mother and children left destitute. When the war was over George found himself without an education, scarcely able to write his name; but he says: "I had too much ambition to remain in this condition, and just as soon as possible I went to work, made money, and went to school." In the fall of 1865 he went to live with an uncle in Missouri, where he worked on a farm. While there in the summer of 1866 he attended a protracted meeting, conducted by Father Haines, a Cumberland Presbyterian. Here he was convicted and converted, and united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. In the fall of 1867, feeling called of God to the work of the ministry, he attended a session of the presbytery at College Grove, Tenn.,

and was recognized as a candidate for the ministry. Arrangements were made for him to go to school and better prepare himself for the work. He went to Caney Springs, in Marshall county, where he remained five months, during which time he made up his mind to become a Methodist. Accordingly he returned to his mother's home, and was received into the Methodist Church by Rev. T. J. Duncan, and was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Tobacco Port Circuit, Clarksville District, R. P. Ransom, presiding elder. In the fall of 1868 he attended the Tennessee Annual Conference, which met at Shelbyville. He had no recommendation for admission, but being anxious to begin the Master's work, he says, "God in his providence opened up the way." Rev. M. R. Jones, then of the Illinois Conference, was introduced, and pleaded for laborers in his section. Brother Nichols volunteered to go, and was accepted and appointed junior preacher to Rev. Norman P. Halsey, on Rome Circuit, Jefferson county, Ill. Without waiting for the Tennessee Conference to adjourn, having received his appointment, he started alone on horseback, with just a change of raiment in his saddlebags and $6.25 in his pocket, to his appointed field of labor, two hundred and twenty-five miles away. Here he traveled that year, receiving just $60 for his year's work. That fall he was received into the Illinois Conference on trial, and appointed junior preacher to B. R. Hester, on the Murphysboro Circuit. He made his home with Joseph Beasley, a "man of means and possessed of the spirit of liberality," who had a single daughter. After a few months of mutual admiration, friendship, love, and courting, George and Ella were happily married, January 6, 1870. They spent the remainder of the year with her family, and that fall he was appointed in charge of Chester Circuit. His faithful wife left her happy home and went with him, ready to suffer and share with him the burdens incident to his itinerant life. Through all the years that have intervened she has been a true and faithful helpmeet in every time of trial and adversity, and, like a Christian heroine, she bears the sad separation, and will patiently await the summons that will call her to him in their Father's house. In 1871-72 he was on Clinton Circuit; in 1873 he traveled Salem Circuit; in 1874, Pana Station; in 1875-77, Columbia and Baldwin Station; in 1878, Ashley Circuit, where he remained three years. In 1881 he was made presiding elder of Salem District, where he remained three years. The third year, such was the condition of his health, brought about by hemorrhage of the lungs, in order to save him a few years longer to the Church, Bishop McTyeire transferred him to the Los Angeles Conference, and appointed him presiding elder of Arizona District. At this Conference, in token of their love and appreciation, the preachers of his district, through Bishop McTyeire, presented him with a fine watch, which he wore to the day of his death. He remained on the Arizona District two years, and his health having much improved, he was transferred to the North Texas Conference, and in 1886 appointed to Mesquite Circuit. Here he stayed two years. In the fall of 1888 he was made presiding elder of the Sulphur Springs District, which position he held three years. In 1891 he was appointed to Terrell District, and during the summer of last year he became so enfeebled by disease that it was in great physical weakness he closed up his year's work. He was unable to attend the last session of his Conference, but sent his love to the brethren with an assurance that God was with him. He was granted a superannuated relation. By the assistance of the best medical aid and tenderest nursing he rallied somewhat, and fondly cherished the thought of getting up again. Though he realized that his work for the Church and Master was done, yet he was happy in the hope of getting well enough to build a cottage for his wife and daughter ere God called him home. This was the only motive that prompted a desire on his part to live. He did not fear death, and he was ready to depart and be with Christ, which was preferable to him, but to live long enough to build a house for wife and daughter seemed needful for them. No one ever struggled for life more bravely and fought death back with greater energy than he did. When, just a week before he died, it was apparent that his end had come, his kind physician assured him that even his hours on earth were numbered; and when his weakness so increased and he had reached the extremity of emaciation, when watchers round his bedside looked for every breath to be his last, with unusual strength of voice and vigor of intellect, and with a heavenly brightness in his eyes, he called his friends and loved ones round him, and to each and all, as one by one would come, he would give some faithful word of counsel and add his blessing. He told them that he would live through the week, that "Saturday about noon the roll would be called and he would go," and the following "Sunday he would be a priest, and worship in the temple above not made with hands." The night before he died he asked the time; when told it was just 12 o'clock, he replied: "I have just twelve hours to stay. God has let me live these last few days to testify of his goodness and his grace; to let others know that the gospel I have preached is no cunningly devised fable." He said: "I do not claim perfection, but I do claim redemption through the merits of Jesus Christ our Lord." Frequently he endeavored to cheer his sorrowing wife, begging her "not to weep, but to rejoice; rejoice with him that he had obtained salvation through the Lamb." He gave all directions for his funeral services: said he wanted no lavish display at his burial, but wanted to be taken to the church, and after a brief memorial service conducted by the pastor, assisted by as many of his brethren in the ministry as could conveniently be present, he wanted to be buried under the banner of the Methodist Church for which he had fought, and the Methodist ritual used at the service. Several of the brethren of the district came to see him, and gladly listened to his words of wisdom that seemed to come like heavenly inspiration from his dying lips. All felt it was good to be with him. When the hour for his departure was at hand, according to his own prediction, his wife said to him: "You will soon be with the Lord." Too weak to speak, a heavenly smile played over his pallid face, and he nodded, "Yes! yes! yes!" And as a tired child rests its weary head upon its mother's breast, he leaned upon the bosom of his Lord and fell on sleep.

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL McDUGAL was born in Tennessee April 13, 1822. Of his early life we have no information. From the minutes of the Conference it is learned that he was converted in 1838. He is known to have said that he was licensed to preach and recommended for admission on trial at the same time, and that his first effort to preach was at the Annual Conference in the presence of the bishop and a large number of preachers. This was in 1853. He was ordained deacon November 25, 1855, by Bishop Pierce. He finished his course of study, and was elected elder in 1857, but said he was not worthy of such honors, and asked that his ordination be deferred until he felt more able to discharge the duties of an elder. He was finally ordained elder by Bishop Marvin, at Marshall, Tex., October 14, 1866. He was a member of the East Texas Conference till the organization of the Trinity (now North Texas) Conference. He went with it in its organization. The appointments for 1867 indicate that he was transferred to the West Texas Conference, and in 1868 he was appointed as a supply on the McAllister Circuit. He reentered this Conference, and, beginning with 1869, served the following charges one year each in the order given: Pine Creek Mission, Boston, Ladonia, Clarksville, Robinsville, and Bonham Circuits, Clarksville Station, Roxton, Longview, and Robinsville Circuits. He then served the Wayland Circuit two years, when its name was changed to Rosalie Circuit, which he served two years longer. At the close of the year 1883, having buried the wife of his youth during the year, and his health having failed, he was placed on the superannuated list; but at the next Conference he was appointed to the Aubrey Circuit, which he served one year, and then was appointed to the Denton Circuit two years in succession. His next charge was Hickory Creek Mission for one year, and his last was Aubrey Circuit, in 1890. He was then placed on the superannuated list, where he was kept till death. His last sermon was preached in Aubrey, Tex., on the third Sunday in last August, from the text, "We love him because he first loved us." He was a useful preacher. Sinners were convicted and converted under his preaching. He had an unwavering faith in God. Only a few days before he died he said to brother Davis: "I shall not be able to go with you to the Conference next week. Before it meets I will be in heaven. Tell the brethren how I loved them and long to mingle with them once more in this life, but it is the will of the Good Being that I meet with the conference up yonder. Tell my brethren to meet me in heaven." He fell asleep in Jesus at Aubrey, Tex., on Sunday, November 4, 1894. He was laid to rest in the McKenzie Wilson cemetery, two miles from Aubrey.

JOHN CALVIN RANDALL was born in Ruthertord (afterwards Cleveland) county, N. C., January 25, 1829. His boyhood was spent on the farm; his parents were poor, and unable to give him an education, though by industry and perseverance he became a fairly good English scholar. He said of himself: "I do not remember when I was not strongly religiously impressed." At the age of eleven he began earnestly to seek the Saviour, and in his twelfth year he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church on probation. It was the next year, on the night of September 4, 1841, at Sulphur Springs camp ground, in Cleveland county, N. C., that he was able "to tell to all around what a dear Saviour he had found." From that hour, he said, he never doubted his conversion. In a short time he was most powerfully impressed that he must preach the gospel, but how to accomplish this great work with his lack of an education was the great problem; and then the strong will-power of the man showed itself, and by hard study and close application he surmounted the difficulty. In his seventeenth year he was appointed class leader. Thus he commenced to exercise in public, examining the class and leading in prayer. In 1849 he was licensed to exhort by Rev. J. L. Shuford, of the South Carolina Conference. He was licensed to preach in 1856, and served the Church as local preacher till the beginning of the war. In this sphere he did good and faithful work, assisting his pastor and often holding meetings of his own. These meetings resulted in bringing a large number into the Church. He entered the Confederate army June 26, 1861, and as a soldier preached as he had opportunity till he was wounded at the battle of Fredericksburg, losing his right arm, September 17, 1862. While lying on the battlefield and reported as dead, he resolved that if God would spare his life he would give himself to the itinerancy. He was admitted on trial in the South Carolina Conference at Newbury, December, 1864, having been ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce at Sumter, S. C., in 1863. He was appointed to the Dallas Circuit 1865-66. While on this circuit he married Miss Mary C. Hardin. He was transferred to the Trinity (now the North Texas) Conference in 1868, at its second session, and was appointed to the Springville (now the Emory) Circuit. During the session of the Conference at Jefferson in 1870 he was ordained elder by Bishop Marvin, and again appointed to the Springville Circuit; and in 1871 he was appointed to the Garden Valley Circuit, which he served three years. While on this circuit his health failed, and at the close of his third year he was granted a supernumerary relation. He was never able after this to do much work, though his greatest desire was to be in the thickest of the fight. At Sherman, in 1879, he was granted a superannuated relation. From this time on his health failed steadily, he having frequent and severe spells of sickness. His was a hard life as we see it, but in poverty and bodily weakness he never murmured nor complained. His great delight was to visit the Conference session to hear and see his brethren. He attended the last session of this Conference at Wichita Falls, where he contracted a severe cold which settled upon his lungs, and from which he never fully recovered. About March 11, 1894, he was stricken down with pneumonia, and from the first it was evident that the attack would be severe, and he thought it would prove fatal. He called his only son John, and said: "My son, if I go this time, you know where to find me." His pastor said to him one day: "Brother Randall, how is it with you?" He answered: "All is well; my prospects for heaven are bright." On the morning of March 18 it was apparent to the most careless observer that the end was near, and at the close of that Sabbath day he passed to his reward. He leaves a wife and four children. We buried him in the city cemetery at Sulphur Springs, March 19, 1894.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except those of H. C. Rogers and Z. Parker, who were expelled from the ministry and membership of the Church.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Jere Reese, James M. Grant, William G. Connor. 3.

JERE REESE was born in Georgia, September 10, 1822, and was converted and joined the Church on his birthday, September 10, 1843. In that state he was licensed to preach the gospel in 1849. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Pierce in Atlanta, and elder by Bishop McTyeire. Brother Reese was admitted on trial in the Northwest Texas Conference at Waxahachie in 1881, and that year and 1882 he was appointed to the Jacksboro Circuit. His next appointment was Glen Rose Mission in 1883. In the fall he was transferred to the North Georgia Conference. In 1889 he was received back by transfer from the North Georgia Conference and appointed to the Stonewall Mission. In 1890 he was put in charge of Acton Circuit, and in 1891, on account of failing health, he was placed on the superannuated list, in which he remained until called to his heavenly reward. He was a good man, a faithful preacher, did his work well, approved of God and the Church which he so long served and honored. He quietly passed away at Granbury, May 12, 1894. He was buried at Cleburne, where loving kindred hands decorate his grave, in the Christian's hope of a reunion in the heavenly kingdom of our God.

JAMES M. GRANT was born in Tennessee, May 13, 1826. He was born a child of God at about the age of fifteen, while attending a camp meeting in the same state. Brother Grant was twice married; first to Miss Sarah Swan, of Arkansas, in May, 1859. This good Christian woman only lived to give cheer and comfort to her husband the short space of three weeks and three days. After the lapse of eleven years, brother Grant was again married to Miss Lucy A. Dingle, of Huntsville, Ark., with whom he lived happily during the remainder of his life. The fruit of this union was an only daughter, Eudora, now Mrs. Leveridge, who, with the aged mother and widow, mourns her irreplaceable loss. Brother Grant was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Pochontas Circuit, Arkansas Conference, April 17, 1858; was admitted on trial into the traveling connection of the same Conference in 1859 or 1860; was ordained both deacon and elder by Bishop Paine, October 8, 1865, at Covington, Tenn. He served the Helena Circuit his first two years in the Conference. There is no record of his labor during the four years of the war. After the war he traveled in Washington and Benton counties for one or two years, when, because of failing health, he became a supernumerary for a year or two. He served Cane Hill Circuit in 1869-70; Marshall Circuit in 1870-71; Bellfont Circuit for two years; transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference in the fall of 1873, and served the Peoria work part of the year 1874; Mt. Vernon Circuit, 1875; Springtown Circuit, 1876; Eldorado Circuit, 1877-80; Cartersville Circuit, 1881; Salt Hill Circuit, 1882. He was supernumerary in 1883. Part of the year 1884 he served Bell Plains and Baird work. At the session of the Conference held at Waco in the fall of 1884 he was superannuated, which relation he sustained until his death, October 1, 1894. Brother Grant did good, faithful work during the active years of his ministry. No doubt in eternity many will attribute their salvation to his instrumentality. For thirty years his health had not been good, and for three years before his death he had been quite feeble. But in the midst of his sufferings he was true to God, demonstrating the power of divine grace to sustain and keep in the hour of affliction. Brother Grant walked the "valley of the shadow of death" with the tread of a conqueror, saying in his last moments, with Bishop McKendree: "All is well; all is well."

WILLIAM GREEN CONNOR was born at Orangeburg, Barnwell District, S. C., September 1, 1821. He was "born again" in 1835, in a grove with a classmate while at school at Buck Springs Academy, in his fourteenth year. He took his degree at Randolph-Macon College, Virginia, in June, 1842. The same year, the twenty-first of his age, he was licensed to preach by Henry Bass. In January, 1843, he was admitted on trial in the South Carolina Conference, and was appointed to Black Swamp Circuit, where he remained two years. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Capers and elder by Bishop Andrew. In 1845 he was junior preacher at Columbia, S. C.; in 1846-47, at Fayette, N. C.; in 1848, at Georgetown, S. C.; in 1849, at Orangeburg, S. C.; in 1850, at Cumberland Street Station, Charleston, S. C.; in 1851-52, at Augusta Station, Ga.; in 1853-54, at Columbus Station, Ga.; in 1855-56, at La Grange Station, Ga.; and in 1857 his brilliance and scholarly attainments won him election to the presidency of La Grange Female College, La Grange, Ga., which position his success caused him to retain three successive years. In 1860 he served Bethel Station, Charleston, S. C.; in 1861 he rested on account of sickness. He was for the next three years presiding elder of the Orangeburg District, S. C.; in 1865 at Columbia Station, S. C. Here he was happily married to Miss Caroline C. Dick, of colonial blood. In 1866-67 he labored at Orangeburg Station, S. C.; in 1868 he was transferred to the Texas Conference, and was stationed at Chapel Hill. His character as an educator of Christian womanhood from the girls of our Church followed him, and next we find him elected to and for two years serving as president of Chapel Hill Female College. His fame in this line of Christian service was known beyond his own Conference limits. So we find him transferring to the Northwest Texas Conference, and for the next three years managing Waco Female College as president. Beginning with 1875 he served four years as presiding elder of the Waco District; in 1879, Belton Station; in 1880 he transferred to the North Texas Conference, and was for two years at Sherman; in 1882-83, at Terrell Station; in 1884, at Pilot Point. In 1885 he transferred back to our Conference, and for three years served the most responsible appointment among us, the Georgetown Station, the seat of our educational center as a Church in the state. He next served for two years, 1888-89, Morrow Street Station, Waco, where he finished his half-century in the active ministry. After fifty-one years of itinerant service he was superannuated. He received his retirement to the roll of honor with an ease and grace becoming a hero full of laurels, love and victories; yet his devotion to and active interest in the regular labors of the Church never flagged, even though he was retired from the midst of the fight, and he always welcomed an opportunity which promised any more active duty for him. Upon the acceptance of the financial agency of Waco Female College by Dr. Hayes, he was invited to fill the unexpired Conference year at Tyler. He entertained the proposition with pleasure, and discussed its prospect with delight, and when it was suggested that it might injure him said: "Even so, but some day I shall die anyway; then let me die in the service of the Lord." Before he replied to Dr. Hayes he was seized with the illness from which he never recovered. During his delirium from opiates administered to allay pain and secure rest his life purpose shone forth in earnest exhortation to lead sinners to conviction or in offering consolation to penitents. He was sensible of the approach of death and met the monster with a courage born only of consecration to Christ and devotion to his will. On the morning of the day preceding his death, as he felt the icy touches of the dread pneumonia fastening upon his vitals, he called his family to him and said he was going to leave them, and while he was conscious and comparatively free from pain he wished to bid them a last farewell. This he did with perfect calmness and as much composure as if bidding adieu for some pleasant journey. As to his earthly affairs, his "house was in order." His last and dying wish was that his family should live Christian lives and meet him in heaven. When asked if he had any message, he said: "Tell the brethren I am on my way to God; all is ready, the way is clear, and my soul is at peace." October 8 his spirit took its flight to his everlasting home. He was endowed with noble parts. Nature made him a gentleman, and grace made him a sincere Christian. The Church recognized his abilities, and our Conference felt herself honored in sending him as a delegate to our General Conference in 1874 and in 1878. In bodily presence and bearing he was tidy and circumspect, with a suavity of manner seldom found. His intellect was cultured and polished to the highest touch, while his spiritual nature bore that meek and humble yet courageous air as the insignia of the Master's presence, communion, and control under all circumstances.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? J. S. Hutton, E. A. Garrison. 2.

JOHN S. HUTTON was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1836; came to Canada when seventeen years old, and soon thereafter went south and settled in Jackson, Miss. He was licensed to preach by the Yazoo Quarterly Conference, July 5, 1873. The following year he was received on trial into the Mississippi Conference, and on December 9, 1877, was ordained deacon by Bishop McTyeire. From this Conference he was transferred to the Pacific Conference and stationed at Salinas. In 1882 he was ordained elder by Bishop Hargrove. The following appointments were served by him: Bear Valley, Mountain View, Woodbridge, Anderson, and Big Valley. His last appointment was Sutter City, to which place he was moving when the fatal moment came, November 16, 1893. Brother Hutton was married twice; first to Miss Virginia Reed, June 14, 1864; lastly to Mrs. Lucinda Stapp, in 1888. By the former wife there were born unto him six children, four of whom are still living; the latter survives him, and has the sympathy and prayers of all who knew her devout, faithful husband and our yoke-fellow in the ministry. The circumstances connected with his death are so well known that we need not detail them here. In a moment, without a note of warning, he was summoned into the presence of the King Eternal. He was on his way to Sutter City, the wagon in which he was riding struck a jutting rock, he reached for the lines, fell, and was instantly killed. This occurred November 16, 1893. His body was taken up and borne tenderly to Anderson, where Rev. R. A. Booher buried it with the rites of the Church, a large concourse of weeping friends being present attesting their love and respect for him. Brother Hutton possessed certain elements of character which made him a remarkably useful man to the Church, or to any station or circuit so fortunate as to secure his services. He was intelligent, careful, and painstaking. In the preparation of discourses he gave them all the attention necessary to make them clear and definite statements of doctrine and experience. Pyrotechnics, mere display of oratory, he avoided, but every sermon was a hand-to-hand struggle with sin, and those who listened felt that the preacher had power with God and prevailed. In the business of the Church he was wise, diligent, and successful. Men trusted his judgment and were seldom, if ever, deceived. His work at Beiber and elsewhere will not be forgotten; and there was no man's claim to the support of the Church Extension Board more fully recognized. His intellectual endowments, natural and acquired, were very considerable. His mind was rugged, incisive, and logical; besides, he had read the best books, and had made them by assimilation his own. He therefore brought out of the text things both new and old. At one time he was a teacher, showing that he was not only educated on theological lines, but understood the structure of the language, literature, and mathematics. His was a genuine culture. He was a true friend—honest, unselfish, disinterested. When he gave one his heart his love grew steadfast and stronger, and nothing could alienate him from such a person but wrong-doing on that one's part. All who knew him regarded him a friend worth more than gold or silver. He was a quiet man, as unostentatious as the glorified sun, and as true of heart. He was a religious man. His Bible, his prayers, his class meetings, aye his pulpit, were places where he stood face to face with God. His experience was genuine. Into his life had come the life of men. God, who called him into the ministry, had revealed his Son in him; and, therefore, any day he could give a reason for the hope that was in him. The Holy Ghost enriched and fertilized his life—made it indeed a fruitful one. He was loyal to his Church. He was ready to sacrifice ease, comfort, everything, that her borders might be extended. He asked bishops for the privilege of remaining on the frontier. His toil was not in vain. He went forth weeping, bearing precious seed; now he is reaping, in part at least, his reward. Loyal to the Church. In his estimation she was not a guild, a coterie, an association of ladies and gentlemen for purposes of culture on æsthetic lines, but the body of Christ, the fullness of him that filleth all in all. We honor his devotion, and pray for grace to imitate his example.

EDWIN AUGUSTUS GARRISON, son of Thomas and Margaret Mulford Garrison, was born February 17, 1841, near Port Gibson, Claiborne county, Miss.; and died at Colusa, Cal., April 18, 1894. He was brought up in Port Gibson, his father having moved from his plantation to town when the subject of this sketch was a little child, in order to better educate his children. His father and mother were natives of New Jersey. They were Methodists and faithful Christians. He lost his mother when he was fourteen. His father was a man of deep piety, a man of prayer, who preceded him to the better land in 1879. Brother Garrison was educated in Elliott Academy, Mississippi, Lebanon Academy, Ohio, and Planters College, Port Gibson. He was converted March 2, 1857, at midnight, and at once felt it was his duty to preach, and from the first led in prayer and assisted the pastor in opening services. He was licensed to exhort in 1860 in Port Gibson—Rev. John Lusk, presiding elder, and Rev. John A. B. Jones, preacher in charge. In May, 1861, he enlisted in the Confederate army, contrary to the wishes of his friends in the Church, they desiring him to enter the ministry and the Conference. He enlisted as a member of Claiborne Volunteers; served in the Army of Northern Virginia; was orderly sergeant of company F, Forty-eighth Mississippi regiment. In the army he held regular prayer meetings in the week, and on the Sabbath public services. In May, 1863, Col. J. M. Jones called him to his tent and presented him his chaplain's commission, which had been sent by the Secretary of War in answer to a petition from the regiment, approved by the colonel and brigadier-general, all without his knowledge. He refused the commission, not being a regular minister, but on the solicitation of his friends yielded. From that time he knew no weapon but the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God. At Sailor's Creek, Va., April 2, 1865, he was taken prisoner and carried to Old Capitol Prison, Washington, D. C., arriving the day President Lincoln was assassinated. From there he was taken to Johnson's Island, and was released by a special order of President Johnson, through the influence of A. G. Brow, of Mississippi. Returning home, he was licensed to preach, and received into the Mississippi Conference held at Lexington, Miss., 1865, and appointed to Greenwood Circuit, but failed to get to his work, owing to great difficulties. November 26, 1865, he was married to Mrs. Mollie Hickey. His failure to obey the call to devote his life at this time to the itinerant ministry resulted in financial loss and spiritual decline. His wife ceased not to warn him of his neglect of duty. In May, 1870, he removed to Osceola, Ark., bearing a church letter as a private member. Here he taught school, but constantly felt that, Jonah-like, he was fleeing from duty. Still he tried to satisfy his conscience and keep out of the ministry by being zealous as a private member, leading in prayer meetings, talking in class meetings and love-feasts, superintending Sunday school, and in the absence of ministers officiating at funerals. In the meantime friends would urge him to preach, and letters from Mississippi would urge him to be relicensed and "do his duty." So in August, 1870, he was again licensed, and received on trial at the first session of the White River Conference, held at Mt. Zion, September 28, and appointed to Jacksonport Circuit by Bishop Keener. From that date to his death brother Garrison was known as one of the most faithful of itinerants. Having passed both the first and second years' course of study in 1871, he was ordained deacon and appointed to Batesville Station. Feeling that he had been overestimated and was not able to meet the responsibility, he sprang upon a seat and informed the bishop that he "had made a mistake." After adjournment, in private conversation with Bishop McTyeire, the bishop promised, providing a transfer could be secured, to return him to his former charge, knowing that the people had petitioned for his return. "If not," said the bishop, "my young brother, you must go to your appointment." The transfer was secured. Blessed are the meek. That year he lost his wife. The next year he was appointed to Pleasant Valley Circuit, and was greatly blessed in his work. In 1873 he was again appointed to Batesville Station—Rev. John H. Dye, presiding elder—and he was again blessed with a revival. In December, 1873, he was married to Miss Sue Greenhaw. From Batesville he went to Powhatan, and was again blessed in his work. In 1875 he was made presiding elder of Batesville District by Bishop Doggett. On the district he was a success, but failing health made it necessary that he be relieved, so in 1876 he was sent to Lacrosse and Evening Shade Station, where he remained two years; 1878, to Helena, four years; then, 1882-84, Augusta; 1885-86, Searcy; 1887, Newport. Transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference in the fall of 1887, on account of failing health, and stationed at Clinton, Mo. September, 1888, transferred by Bishop Hendrix to the Denver Conference, and stationed at Trinidad, Colo., serving two years. August 6, 1890, transferred by Bishop Key to the Pacific Conference, and appointed by Bishop Fitzgerald to Merced, where he remained two years, doing a fine work, and where his memory is enshrined in the hearts of all, especially of the young people. October 3, 1892, he was appointed by Bishop Haygood to Colusa, where our dear brother ended his work and life. He preached his last sermon at Colusa, Easter Sunday, 1893, his voice then completely giving way, and after that he could only speak in a whisper. For some months he was prostrated, and not expected to live, but he rallied; and when his successor reached Colusa, October 18, 1893, he found him in the post office, where he cheerfully, though often in great pain and in great prostration, remained till the first day of February, when he surrendered his place, and took his bed on the second. Brother Garrison was a man of heroic mold; courageous, frank, true as steel, and, as his physician said of him, "not a dishonest bone in his body." As a preacher, he was clear, pointed, candid, strong, and full of faith and hope; as a pastor, he was faithful to his flock, loving them truly and tenderly, so as to sacrifice ease, self-interest, and life itself for them. For twenty-three years in Arkansas, Missouri, Colorado, and California, on circuit, station, and district, did our brother stand at his post; a truer, nobler, more manly man one seldom meets. He was a favorite among his brethren in the ministry, and beloved by his people. His name at Colusa, his last charge, is as ointment poured forth. Brother Garrison leaves his wife and six sons—two by his former wife, who now live in St. Louis, Mo.; four by his present wife. His only daughter, Katie, died when she was nearly two years of age. A few days before his departure for the better land, he awoke, and said he had had such a beautiful vision of heaven; and the first one he saw was little Katie, and she knew him. In his last sickness he evinced the most heroic endurance, unflinching courage, unflagging patience, uncomplaining submission, and a faith that faded not, but that grew in power as his bodily strength wore away. A great uplift came to him in the last weeks of his life, he receiving the blessing of sanctification. He expressed himself as experiencing a foretaste of heaven in the wonderful rejuvenating influence that thrilled his soul. He felt the resurrection power. His departure was a triumph. His peace was profound, his faith complete. To his brethren in the Conference he sent this message: "Tell my brethren the gospel that I preached to others sustains me now." As his brethren gathered around his bier, beside the flower-wreathed altar of the church where he had often ministered, it was felt that the voice which had been so long imprisoned by disease was singing glad halleluiahs to the Lamb.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Minton A. Connolly, J. Marion Boyd, Wesley L. Pegues, Samuel B. Jones, William T. Capers. 5.

MINTON A. CONNOLLY was born in Caldwell county, N. C., in 1829; joined the South Carolina Conference at Columbia in 1854; traveled on missions two years, on circuits eighteen years; was a superannuated preacher nineteen years; died at Kershaw, S. C., January 28, 1894. This is a short biography, but it tells the long story of an honored, useful, and consecrated life. Here is a man for you—a strong, true, noble man. He led an obscure life, and a life marred out of its just proportions by circumstances beyond his complete control; but his was a life of sublime courage and heroic faith. A turbine wheel was he, moved and kept in motion by the waters that submerged him. He loved God and loved his brethren. He loved the Church, the Methodist Church, her doctrines, her polity, the splendid history of her heroic past. A gallant knight was he, eager for the fight and valiant in it against any foeman worthy of his steel who dared to assail either the doctrines or the economy of our beloved Methodism. We have not had among us in later years a man more competent to state the doctrines of grace from an Arminian standpoint, or more ready to do so if circumstances required it. He was a strong preacher, a very strong preacher. He read and studied good books, and these both strengthened his robust intellect and gave him weapons for offensive and defensive warfare in the interest of our militant Zion. He has gone from among us, and we feel the loss and cherish his memory.

JAMES MARION BOYD was born in Newberry county, S. C., December 1, 1832. He came of Christian and Methodist parents, who reared him for God and the Church. Not strange was it, then, that at the early age of ten years he gave his heart to God. This new birth occurred at Ebenezer camp meeting, in Newberry county, Rev. J. H. Zimmerman in charge. It must have been a touching thing to hear the young convert lead in prayer, as he did at a prayer meeting soon after. This was but an earnest of his life-long consecration. He was licensed to preach previous to the late war, and looked forward to early entrance into the South Carolina Conference. The war, however, thwarted his plans, and he entered the service of his country in Company D, Thirteenth South Carolina Infantry. In the ranks his quiet, unostentatious, consistent piety was a power for good. His company was said to have been the best in the regiment—largely owing, his colonel declared, to his influence. After the conflict was over brother Boyd served as a junior supply on the Newberry Circuit. In Cheraw, at the Conference of 1869, he joined our ranks. Thenceforth the record he made was without exception one of complete devotion and enlarged usefulness. For twelve years after his entrance into the Conference he served but three charges—East Chester, Fairfield, and Rock Hill. This tells the story of his success. He was then for one year on Chester Circuit, from which he went to the Marion District. After four years here he served another quadrennium on the Charleston District. Then to Spartanburg District, where, just entering upon his fourth year, he ceased at once to work and live. He literally died at his post. He was in attendance on the Pacolet Quarterly Conference, some miles from home. Sunday, February 25, 1894, came in with snow and intense cold, and he had to remain at the hospitable home of one of the brethren of the charge. While sitting by the fireside, in conversation with the family, without warning the summons came. But by every token of his life of holy zeal we are sure it is well with his immortal spirit. Brother Boyd was a thoughtful, suggestive preacher. He was a diligent, faithful, and tender pastor. He was a man of affairs, of sound judgment and business tact. He was one of the best presiding elders we have ever had. He was a man of personal magnetism, winning his way to all hearts, and binding his friends to him as with hooks of steel.

WESLEY LEATHERWOOD PEGUES.—June 22, 1818, to July 16, 1894; January 9, 1839, to July 16, 1894. These dates in their order give the beginnings and the endings of a long and useful life. His natural life stretched through a little more than seventy-six years, and his ministerial life continued through fifty-five years and six months. He reached Cheraw, S. C., July 16, 1894, about 7 o'clock P.M., extremely ill. He was lifted from his buggy to a chair in Dr. Wanamaker's drug store, where he expired in a few moments. He wandered far and long, but he at last came back and ended his life's journey near the spot where he began it, over three-quarters of a century ago. He joined the South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its session in Cheraw, S. C., January 8, 1839. In passing, he paused here to lay this holy commission down with his life. He died with the harness on. He had preached as usual on his circuit, Tradesville, on Sunday, July 16. The next day he was on his way to visit his children in Marlboro county, when the heavenly messenger met him, and bade him cease to labor, and to enter into the "rest that remaineth for the people of God." Bishop James O. Andrew was presiding when he was received on trial into the Conference, and the same ordained him both deacon and elder. He was married three times—to Miss Keitt, of Orangeburg, S. C.; Mrs. Rodgers, of Charleston, S. C.; and Mrs. Sykes, of Timmonsville, S. C. He was a devoted husband and father. In all the relations of life he was true and faithful. While he was the recognized center of the household, yet his rule was so just, considerate, and loving that he commanded the love and esteem of all. It was not hard for him to act the part of a gentleman, for he was born with gentlemanly instincts, which were cultivated in action and refined by the grace of God. He was just, gentle, and generous to all his fellows. We knew of no man who was freer from vanity, pride, envy, malice, and revenge. His ambition seemed not to have been to be elevated above his brethren, nor to outshine them, but to do the best he could. He was ever ready to acknowledge, with undisguised pleasure, capacity, ability, and success in his brethren whom others might consider as his rivals for favor and position. He was a fine representative of nature's nobleman. He was truly pious, and felt the power of the Holy Ghost in his soul, which power was constantly evidenced in his life. He was an earnest promoter of missions, having been a member of the Board of Missions on several occasions. He was one among the few who contributed annually one hundred dollars to the missionary treasury. He was a good preacher, always dividing rightly the word of truth, giving to each his portion in due season. He was a wise and forceful exhorter, knowing where to speak and what to urge upon his congregation after a sermon. While he had fine traits and excellent ability, he excelled in prayer; as a prince he had power with God. Many were so assisted by his prayers as to be enabled to approach the mercy seat acceptably to the saving of their souls while he was leading. His prayers at the close of a brother's sermon were remarkable, and such as we have never heard excelled. No leading thought of the sermon escaped him while he was praying the Lord's blessings upon it. Often have we felt, after he had prayed in behalf of our sermons, that we could preach them better. He was faithful and untiring in his work. It was not his habit to neglect or slight any part of his duty as a preacher. In a protracted meeting he was indefatigable, preaching day and night, in rain or sunshine, with unabated zeal. Thousands have been brought to Christ through his instrumentality, of whom a large company that have gone on before greet him on the eternal shore.

SAMUEL BARKSDALE JONES was born in Charleston, S. C., December 29, 1828; was converted in 1846; graduated from South Carolina Military Academy in 1847; entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1854; and died at Spartanburg, S. C., September 8, 1894. True manhood found its expression in brother Jones. It was marked in his physical development. In any gathering of men he would have drawn the eye of the spectator. It was marked in his mental power, and whether he wrote or spoke, whether in counsel or debate, whether in Conference or pulpit, he stood forth a leader among men. It appeared in that decision of character which ever marked his life. It shone especially as it stood related to true manhood in Christ Jesus. There was no place for compromise in him. He must have been the outspoken opponent of Christ or his devoted friend. He chose the latter, and meant all that it involved. It was at the old Charleston camp ground in 1846, under the ministry of Dr. Whitefoord Smith, that this purpose was formed. It was not without a struggle. In his heart was bitter enmity toward a fellow-student, and he knew that following Christ and love were one and the same thing. The battle was sharp, but when it ended the young cadet had transferred his service to Christ and enlisted for the war. His conversion was immediately followed by his giving a warm embrace to his hitherto bitter foe. In this same decisive spirit he heard the call to the gospel ministry. Nor was he disobedient to the heavenly vision. In 1854 he was admitted into the South Carolina Conference. Here as a preacher he took high rank. His sermons will be remembered by those who heard him in his prime, as when he preached on "The Evidences of Christianity," or "The Prodigal Son," or "Christ Our High Priest," as among the most effective sermons which they have heard. And this preaching was done not only when the multitude was before him, but in the little church to a few score of souls. In his ministry of thirty-nine years he was four years on circuits, two on stations, eleven on districts, eleven supernumerary, and the remainder in the Cokesbury Conference School, the Spartanburg Female College, and the Columbia Female College. He was a man of excellent judgment and executive ability. These made him a man always needed. His two terms as president of the Columbia Female College, his long service as presiding elder, his election to five General Conferences, his services as a trustee of Wofford College, showed how he was trusted; for all of these positions came to him from his brethren—he never sought a place. Had not his throat been afflicted, he was qualified for any position in the gift of the Church. He was married in 1848 to Miss Emma, daughter of Bishop Capers. She lived only a few years. Mrs. Lizzie, wife of Dr. Tally, of Sumter, is the only surviving child. He was again married in 1856 to Miss Charlotte E. Power, of Abbeville. Broken in health and needing rest, he resigned the presidency of the college in June, and went to the Piedmont region seeking rest and health, but in vain. His work was done. The health-giving waters, the skilled physicians, the mountain breezes, and the devoted attention of loved ones, all failed. "You must give me up," he said. "It seems to me that Aunt Susan [who reared him] and Emma [Mrs. E. Carlisle, who had recently died] are always about me, and I am looking for the call." To one he said: "It is just as God wills; I would not turn my hand to decide." Later he said: "It is all well. I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." When at length he became unconscious of his surroundings, one said: "Doctor, do you realize the presence of Jesus?" Immediately and positively he nodded his head. "Any message for the brethren?" He, in reply, spoke a whole sentence, but no one could hear him, so feeble was his voice. As watching friends sang, "In the Christian's home in glory," his eyes brightened again, and like the old soldier who hears the sound of battle he seemed to wish to swell the song. The Holy Spirit came down upon the little company, and the shout of praise was heard. At last he heard the order of his Lord, "Come up higher," and departed to be with Christ.

WILLIAM TERTIUS CAPERS, the third of this name, was the fourth son of Bishop Capers, and was born in Milledgeville, Ga., January 20, 1825. Most of his early life was spent in Charleston, S. C., when his father was serving the Church as pastor, presiding elder, Missionary Secretary, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, and bishop. Entering the Charleston College when quite young, he was graduated in his eighteenth year. Handsome in person, elegant in manners, quick in his perceptions, affectionate and sympathetic, with a high sense of honor, and overflowing with merriment and generosity, the young graduate gave promise of the future man. At a camp meeting held near the city of Charleston, he was awakened under a sermon preached by the venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce. The text was, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold; but he that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." Bishop Wightman, speaking of this sermon, says: "The subject was treated with the skill, force, and sweep of a master of pulpit oratory." A few days after this he was converted. His father, who was then in Baltimore, attending the General Conference, wrote to him as follows: "My very dear son, I thank God. I bless his holy name with joy unspeakable that he gave you courage to acknowledge him on Tuesday night at the altar in Trinity Church; and on Thursday night, April 30, at the love-feast, when you joined the Church; and again on Saturday night, when you found peace in believing." Called of God to the work of the ministry, he was licensed to preach, and in December, 1844, was admitted into the South Carolina Conference. After traveling six years he was located on account of ill health. During this part of his life he was teaching in Sumter District, Greenville, Anderson, and Georgetown. In Georgetown he was employed six years as principal of the Indigo Society School. At the opening of the war between the states he volunteered, and served for some time as a private in the ranks; subsequently he was appointed chaplain of the Tenth South Carolina regiment, which position he held till failing health necessitated his resignation. Readmitted into the South Carolina Conference in 1862, he continued to serve the Church chiefly in the cities and towns of the state, with great acceptability and usefulness, till the close of his active ministry. Not many lives have been so completely dominated by an impassioned love of "the true, the beautiful, and the good" as was that of William Capers. His spirit seems to have fed on Paul's immortal chapter on charity till his mind and heart like mirrors reflected its truths. In the pulpit the love of the Father, the sympathy of Jesus, and the comfort of the Spirit were the themes he delighted to dwell upon. These he preached with a naturalness so perfect that to some it seemed affected; with the graces of oratory as un-studied as if he knew nothing of elocution; and with an enthusiasm and pathos that frequently carried him to the heights of eloquence. Naturally a poet, he found exquisite enjoyment in the beauties of Scripture and the gems of literature. As a pulpit reader he had few superiors. In rendering the lessons, like Ezra, he read "in the book, in the law of God, distinctly; and gave the sense, so that they understood the reading." He tried to give by voice as well as word God's thoughts to men. A few years ago an eminent lawyer, who is noted for his eloquence, remarked that the reading by Dr. Capers of Toplady's beautiful hymn, beginning "Rock of Ages, cleft for me," was so affecting that it had moved him to tears. Solicitous for souls, he was a faithful shepherd of the flocks committed to his care. Nature as well as grace contributed to make him an excellent pastor. A childlike simplicity, a voice and face which revealed his emotions, a ready command of resources, and a hopefulness which always looked to a brighter future—all these, joined to a high ideal of Christian character and a yearning desire to give peace and comfort to bleeding hearts, made his presence a benediction in the chamber of sickness and the house of mourning. In social and domestic life he was peculiarly happy. Bright, graceful, and cheerful, his urbanity made him charming at home and a welcomed guest in every gathering of friends. Unaffected and sympathetic in the homes of the poor, none were ever embarrassed at his presence. At ease among the cultured and the rich, his company was sought and he was universally admired. Affectionate, he was considerate and kind; meek, he never thought of himself as highly as he ought; contented, he neither murmured nor complained; unselfish, he sought the happiness of others more than his own; benevolent, he gave beyond his means; sincere, he was never suspicious; true, he was faithful to his engagements and friends; honest, he owed no man anything; magnanimous, he was above all meanness. With a noble self-respect he never brought himself forward nor sought for promotion. All honors which came to him came freely. Indeed, there was in his character such a galaxy of virtues as to rank him among the noblest of men and the purest of Christ's followers. Like most Methodist preachers who have consecrated their lives to the itinerant ministry, and like his Lord and Master, he was poor. The hour most dreaded by the faithful itinerant came upon him at Charleston Conference in 1892. He was superannuated. With a pale face, but a brave heart, he met it, and in a few touching words to the Conference he bade farewell to his life work. Committing himself and the dear companion of his life to God, he went forth; and God, true to his promise, led him by a way he had not known. Columbia was chosen as his future home. Here the disease from which he had so long suffered made rapid progress. Periodical attacks of intensest pain wasted his body, but failed to affect his spirit. His faith, hope, love, joy, and habitual cheerfulness came forth from these terrific attacks as the shining of stars after the passage of the storm. On his last birthday the following entry was made in his note book: "In my seventieth year let my heart say,

'Tis Jesus, the first and the last,
Whose spirit shall guide me safe home;
I'll praise him for all that is past,
And trust him for all that's to come."

With the hope that the bracing air of the up-country might prove beneficial, he and his devoted wife went to Greenville for the summer. It soon became evident, however, that no permanent relief could be expected, and that the time of his departure was at hand. His sufferings were intense, and were only relieved when, on the evening of September 10, 1894, he entered into life eternal. "These last years!" says that one who waited upon him so lovingly, and whose heart is now hungering "for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still"—"these last years! How can I express the wonderful heroism, patience, forgetfulness of self, marvelous cheerfulness, gratitude, and abounding love of these last years of untold suffering?" The gospel was his theme, and it was a blessed lesson to witness the willingness with which he took day by day the descending steps of the river of death. Brought up in a southern home, where the fairest types of Christian character were before him every day, surrounded by the culture and refinement of as pure a civilization as ever adorned any section of this continent, William Tertius Capers may have been spared in the providence of God to come down through scenes of blood and trial to this evening of the century that the later-born sons of the Church and state might have a noble example of the piety and intelligence, courtesy and generosity of the cultured classes of the days that are dead.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? J. O. Langston, B. F. Breedlove, J. O. A. Clark, W. C. Bass. 4.

J. O. LANGSTON was born in Columbia county, Ga., January 29, 1857; and died in Fort Gaines, Ga., January 14, 1894. As we usually speak of human life the interval between these dates cannot be called long, but in the case of brother Langston it was sufficiently long for the record of those spiritual experiences and attainments and activities that are in every instance the proof of participation in the divine nature, and thereby the assurance of endless life in the world to come. Thus goes the record: converted at the age of ten years, licensed to preach when eighteen, serving for four years as a local preacher, doing the work of a traveling preacher for fourteen years, and all the while producing the genuine fruits of the Spirit in every relation to God and men. The world did not know him as a great preacher, and his appointments were among the less prominent ones of the Conference; but his work, both in the pulpit and in the pastoral relation, was done with such fidelity and practical good sense, and in such constant reliance upon the help of God, that genuine success crowned his efforts on all the charges he served. He had the spirit of true loyalty to the Church in all her claims upon him, serving her not only without complaint, but also with serene cheerfulness, whatever might be the privations incidental to his work. The charges he served were, in chronological order, as follows: Laurens Mission, one year; Appling Circuit, one year; Ocmulgee Circuit, two years; Swainsboro, one year; Macon Circuit, two years; Gordon Circuit, one year; Bronwood Circuit, three years; Fort Gaines Circuit, two years; Shellman, one year; Wadley, one year; and Fort Gaines again, one year. He easily gained popularity with all classes; not the popularity that men of the world seek after for its own sake simply, but such as came to him incidentally because of his willingness to adapt himself to the varied phases of the life of his people in order to do them good. A tendency to reserve was somewhat strongly marked in his nature, and as the result he was never demonstrative in his religious experience, though none ever doubted the genuineness of it. For the same reason the number of his Conference friends really intimate with him was comparatively small, but those who did thus know him learned to highly value the genial and kindly nature found beneath this reserve. His wedded life dates from November 7, 1877. On that day he was married to Miss Maggie W. Webster, of Putnam county, Ga., who, with three children, is still living. Her testimony is that he ordered his family life according to the teaching of the word of God, therein blending proper firmness of discipline with ardent devotion as a husband and father. His death was hastened by his unwillingness to give up the work that was so dear to his heart. Had he retired from the effective ranks three years since, he would in all probability have been still among us. But he accepted a superannuate relation to the Conference only when forced to do so by failure of strength; and after one month of inactivity from this cause, he went home to God.

BENJAMIN F. BREEDLOVE was born in Hancock county, Ga., April 29, 1837; and died at Marshallville, Ga., October 8, 1894. He received an academic education at Irwinton, Ga., and entered the itinerant ministry in 1855, in his nineteenth year, becoming a member of the Georgia Conference. In 1869, while serving in Savannah, Ga., he was married to Miss Annie Murrell, a niece of Gen. George P. Harrison. She proved a helpmate indeed to him in all his life and ministry. Highly educated, refined and cultured, she was well suited to aid her husband in the intricate duties of the pastorate. This she did in every relationship he sustained to the Church and his ministry. He scarcely could have attained to his prominence and efficiency but for the inspiration of his faithful and accomplished wife. In 1877 God took from him this good woman, and left him to finish the work alone. During the last twenty-six years of his ministry he served the following charges: 1868, Magnolia Springs Circuit; 1869, Dawson Station; 1870-71, Fort Valley and Marshallville; 1872-74, Cuthbert Station; 1875, Broad Street, Columbus; 1876-77, Bethany Circuit; 1878-

80, Talbot Station; 1881-82, First Street, Macon; 1883-85, Waynesboro Circuit; 1886-87, Marshallville and Montezuma; 1888, Waycross; 1889, East Macon; 1890, First Street, Macon; 1891-92, Valdosta Station; 1893, Lumpkin—but in the summer of that year his health failed completely, and he was forced to give up his charge. At the ensuing Annual Conference he was granted a superannuate relation, which relation he sustained until his death the following year. Brother Breedlove was a very feeble man physically, and his active life and efficient work were always a marvel to his friends. Exceedingly sensitive, he always kept his ailment to himself; and if his malady was referred to in his presence, he would always speak of it as a trifling matter. After his whole system had been undermined by disease, he still clung to the hope that he would soon be well and able to do full work again. He wanted to live, not for a selfish aim, but that he might spend and be spent in the work that had so long filled and thrilled his soul; yet with every expression of such desire there was a manifest resignation to the divine will. Socially, brother Breedlove was a delightful companion. His memory was well stored with reminiscences, full of sunshine and pleasing anecdotes, but never did he resort to low or vulgar themes as a source of supply for his ready conversation. He was as chaste as a woman, and guileless. Brother Breedlove was a devoted father, and scrupulously careful in the training of his children, who owe their many gifts and graces largely to his personal oversight. He was a good preacher; not a man of great force and eloquence, but clear, simple, and scriptural. He loved to preach. Preaching seemed to him a stimulant that gave him new life and strength. He modestly sought opportunities to preach, and always showed the highest appreciation of any kind of criticism of his efforts. He appreciated the confidence of others, and sought the friendship of all without compromise of any religious principles. There were no men he loved more than Methodist preachers, and his bright, genial disposition was to them a social pleasure. During the last year of his life no one can estimate the deep gloom and intense suffering through which he passed, but we are assured that the Lord gave him light all through that dark valley; and his well marked Bible gave expressions of the fact that he clung to the promises of God. To these he often referred while in conversation with his friends, realizing as he did that the end was near. Resting in the faith which is in Christ Jesus, his mind would often turn to his brethren in the field work, inquiring after them and the prosperity of Zion as though he too was going forth with them. On the morning of October 8, 1894, his son, who left his bedside for a few moments, returning found his father speechless. He summoned the family at once, but none could understand what the dying man would have them hear. The shades of his last restless night of waiting were being lifted, the morning was breaking in upon his raptured soul—a morning whose eternal sunshine left with every teardrop some of the reflected beauty of the Divine likeness and love. Vainly did he try to tell of the glorious visions of familiar faces he had longed to see. But his life was fast ebbing, and he was soon gone, leaving upon his couch an emaciated body, whose life had gone with songs and triumphs to swell the praises of God on the shores of eternal deliverance.

JAMES OSGOOD ANDREW CLARK was born in Savannah, Ga., October 6, 1827; and died in Macon, Ga., September 4, 1894. He received his education at Andover College and Brown University, Rhode Island, graduating with distinction at the latter under the eminent Dr. Wayland. After his graduation he turned his attention to the study of law, which he had chosen as his profession for life, and entered on its practice in Savannah, Ga. His mental qualities eminently fitted him for legal studies, and had he continued in that profession would no doubt have reached its highest honors; but God had a higher and a nobler work for him to do, and in 1853, during a wonderful revival at Trinity Church, he felt a call to preach, and after a severe struggle between his natural tastes and his convictions, he surrendered with all his heart and soul for life. Brother Clark was twice married. In 1855 he married Miss Amanda Mann, of Augusta, Ga., and has one child living by that marriage. In 1866 he married Miss Ella Anderson, of Burke county, Ga., and has four children living by this marriage. He was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Trinity Church, Savannah, in February, 1854, and was assigned to the charge of the Augusta City Mission. He was received on trial in the Georgia Conference at the session of 1854, held in Atlanta, Ga., and was the best educated and most conspicuous member of one of the largest classes ever admitted on trial. He was returned to the Augusta City Mission in 1855, with Rev. James E. Evans as his senior colleague. During that year St. James Church was built, and a society of more than two hundred members organized, with a flourishing Sunday school, and he was its first pastor. His Conference appointments were as follows: In 1855, City Mission, Augusta; 1856, Thomaston Station; 1857-58, Washington Station; 1859-61, presiding elder on Athens District; 1862, Macon District; 1863-64, agent Emory College; 1865, presiding elder on Augusta District; 1866-67, St. Paul's, Columbus; 1868-71, professor in Emory College; 1872-75, presiding elder on Savannah District; 1876-78, presiding elder on Macon District; 1879-82, agent Wesley Monumental

Church; 1883-85, pastor First Street Church, Macon; 1886, pastor at Americus; 1887-89, presiding elder of the Sandersville District, where he did some of the most efficient and enduring work of his life. In 1890-92, he was presiding elder of the Macon District; 1893-94, presiding elder of the North Macon District. From this list it will be seen that Dr. Clark filled many of the most important and responsible appointments in the Church. He served twenty years on districts, ten years as station pastor, six years as agent, and four years in college work. He was twice elected to the General Conference, and was a member of the sessions of 1874 and 1878. All of these appointments were filled by him with ability and fidelity. Appointed to the eldership as soon as he was ordained an elder, he developed administrative powers which speedily brought him to the front rank among his brethren. His education and legal training, his knowledge of Church history and Church law, his courage and zeal, eminently qualified him for his position. Dr. Clark was an able expounder of the gospel—clear, true, and strong. His sermons were compact and brimful of thought. His style was argumentative and logical; his diction was always faultless. At times he was grand and eloquent; at other times there was a pathos and persuasiveness in his preaching which melted and subdued the heart, and this grew upon him with advancing years. He was a thorough classical scholar, and was well qualified to teach those branches. He knew the Greek Testament by heart, and has been heard to say that if the English Testament was lost or destroyed he could reproduce it entire. He was a warm advocate of education, and by sermons and addresses aroused much interest in higher education on his wire-grass district, resulting in the establishment of the Nannie Lou Warthen Institute at Wrightsville, a school of high grade for both sexes. Besides this, he lectured on the general subject of education, seeking to awaken Georgia and the south to larger efforts in educating our people, that we might avert a fearful doom of vandalism and African rule. For several years past he has been engaged in literary work, resulting in the production of several strong and valuable books. A very wide range of learning and reading is evidenced in these productions. As a debater he possessed great force, and was a foeman worthy to combat with the ablest minds. He clung to his opinions with great pertinacity, and his very ardor and intensity sometimes defeated the cause which he advocated. He gave hard blows, but not in anger. He contended for principles, and the personal element never entered into his contests. He would oppose his dearest friend if he thought him wrong in his opinions, but when the contest was over he was as loving and genial as ever. The Saviour's law of forgiveness never had a truer or more Christ-like exponent. He could not cherish bitterness or selfishness. Dr. Clark possessed a warm heart and a generous, confiding nature. He loved his brethren, and it was a joy to him to mingle with them and to entertain them at his hospitable home. He was true to his Church, and supported her institutions with unwavering loyalty; and in the pulpit, through his pen, and by a generous liberality, he sought to sustain them to the utmost. For forty years he was a most important factor in the growth and development of Methodism in Georgia, and the impress of his cultivated mind, large heart, and fervent zeal will be felt for years to come. Our departed brother had a genuine and thorough experience of grace; his piety was deep, sincere, and consistent. He held and advocated a lofty standard of Christian attainment. He pressed toward it himself and urged others to seek after that "holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." He realized the peace of God, which passeth understanding, and was often filled with the joy of the Holy Ghost. Into the sacred dominion of his private life we may not enter. Of the tender relations of husband and father we may not write, beyond the bare statement that few, if any, excelled him in the exhibition of those virtues which constitute the charm and delight of the home circle, and the absence of which will often cause the sorrowing loved ones to feel,

O for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still.

We miss our dear departed brother much on the Conference floor and in the bishop's council chamber, but we rejoice in the assurance that our loss is his everlasting gain.

WILLIAM CAPERS BASS was born in Augusta, Ga., January 13, 1831. His father, Rev. Henry Bass, was for many years a successful pioneer Methodist preacher. It was while his father was presiding elder of the Augusta District, then in the South Carolina Conference, that the son was born. The close of that year was memorable in Georgia Methodism, for it was then that the Georgia Conference was set off from the South Carolina Conference; and as the father adhered to the latter, the young man grew up in South Carolina, and there received his early training. At Cokesbury young Bass prepared for college, and there, August 22, 1848, at the age of seventeen, he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and five days afterwards was happily converted. He left Cokesbury to enter upon a life for which subsequent years proved that he was eminently fitted, not only by culture and discipline, but by an almost intuitive aptness for imparting knowledge. His first school was in Barnwell district.

It was his purpose to teach two years and then to enter the South Carolina College, but God ordered otherwise. To Oxford he went in January, 1850, and entered the sophomore class half advanced. He graduated from that school in 1852, afterwards going to Greensboro, where he accepted a professorship in the academy of that place. Under the presidency of Rev. Cosby W. Smith, young Bass entered his labors as assistant professor. There these congenial spirits taught until young Smith was called to the professorship of mathematics in Wesleyan Female College. The friendship formed between these two youthful collaborators was cemented by mutual regard and affection, and lasted undiminished until death. In October of that year, two or three months after he began his labors at Greensboro, Capers Bass was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of President Smith. During his residence at Greensboro two events occurred which had no slight influence upon his future. One was his marriage, the other his call to the ministry. There, in July, 1854, he married Octavia Nicholson, the pride and ornament of her native village, and to whom he was largely indebted for the splendid success of his useful life. The other, his call to the ministry, he answered in his twenty-first year, and applied for license to preach, which was granted by the Quarterly Conference of the Greensboro Circuit, held at the old Walker church, in Greene county, October, 1852. At this famous old church George F. Pierce was licensed to preach, and from its pulpit the future great Methodist bishop preached his first sermon. And from the pulpit of the church where he too was licensed Capers Bass first called sinners to repentance and faith in Christ. We find him at the close of his labors at Greensboro a professor in the Madison Female College. There he entered upon the special work as a teacher of girls. At the end of his first year at Madison he was called to the Wesleyan, but, persuaded by his friends and the authorities at Madison to decline the call, he remained there five years longer. Again called to Wesleyan, he accepted the professorship of natural science, in October, 1859. In this pioneer—or rather, mother—of female colleges, at the time he began his professorship, the other members of the faculty were: John M. Bonnell, president; Cosby W. Smith, professor of mathematics; F. H. Foster, professor of ancient languages; C. Schwartz, professor of modern languages. In the department of natural science Dr. Bass continued until the resignation of Dr. E. H. Myers, who had succeeded Dr. Bonnell in 1874. After the resignation of Dr. Myers, the trustees chose the professor of natural science to fill the vacancy. It was just such a combination as was needed, for the college took new life; it entered upon a higher plane of usefulness, and as long as Bass and

Smith lived and were strong to work, it was felt that the college would be well manned—that there would be no retrograde movement, but a sure and steady advance. Nor has Wesleyan or the public been disappointed in Dr. Bass; for when all his embarrassments are known, his success will appear phenomenal. It was during his presidency that the late George I. Seney nobly and generously gave a large sum to remodel and enlarge the building. Before this work was completed it was found that additional sums were needed to finish the splendid plan of the architect; hence it was thought best to issue bonds to complete it. To meet the interest on these bonds, and to provide a sinking fund for their retirement, the trustees were dependent on what should accrue from the lease. Fortunately the right man was the lessee, and happily faith in his ability to pay the rentals floated the bonds, secured their gradual retirement, and enabled the trustees to finish their magnificent building. Meanwhile the college prospered. In one year as many as sixty young women received diplomas, and in another as many as fifty-eight. Dr. Bass was a man of commanding yet pleasing appearance. He was kind, gentle, and companionable. Though a scholar of superior intellect and training, his simple and unaffected manners made the lowliest of his inferiors feel perfectly at ease in his company. In discipline he was firm but kind; in sympathy, warm and responsive; in charities, abundant; in creed, a Methodist of the broadest yet of the truest type; in faith, strong and unyielding, even in the face of seeming impossibilities; in character, blameless. A great man, with his whole life consecrated to God; having spent his life and substance for good, in the comfort and elevation of humanity. As a teacher he was earnest, thoroughly and eminently successful, having in view both the intellectual and moral training of those committed to his care. Often he has been heard to say: "My children, I would rather have you go home to your parents rejoicing in the love of God than that you should carry off all the honors of this college." His peculiar work, with all others of like character, had obstacles, yet this noble educator has given diplomas to seven hundred and thirty young women—more than one-half of the thirteen hundred and forty seven that old Wesleyan has graduated. And who can tell how many more, who did not graduate, received instruction from him during the twenty years of his presidency of Wesleyan. Of the one hundred and thirty-four graduates in music, all except one had their diplomas from him. And besides, this man of God has sent into our missionary field several noble women who have told or are now telling their benighted sisters in heathen lands of the love of God to man. Alice Bonnell, Miss Gary, Tochie MacDonell, and Ella Granbery have thus illustrated their alma mater in China, Mexico, and Brazil. And to these must be added Laura Haygood, who, though she did not graduate under him, was taught by him. As a preacher he had in many respects few superiors. He was not what many would term an eloquent preacher, but earnest, clear, spiritual, and forcible. When Dr. Bass was called to the ministry he did not feel himself specially called to the itinerant work. He was persuaded that teaching was his life work, though he entered the South Georgia Conference in 1867, and remained a member of this Conference until his death. In both spheres he was preëminently successful. Few itinerant preachers had been in labors more abundant or more helpful; and not many had been abler in the pulpit. No one visited the sick more than he; no one in a given year was called upon to bury so many dead; and when not serving as pastor, sent by the Conference, he was keeping up for thirty years regular appointments at different places—among them Damascus, Swift Creek, and Bass (which was founded by himself and called by his name). At Damascus he preached for thirty-five years. In every position he held, whether in Church or in society, he was faithful to the last, and he even continued his labors until his physical troubles forced him to resign the presidency of Wesleyan Female College, which took effect at the close of the commencement in the month of June of the year 1894. At five o'clock on the morning of November 15, 1894, the spirit of William Capers Bass left us for its home with the good. His malady had made silent the tongue that had so often and eloquently appealed to hearts of sorrow filled to breaking, but nothing seemed able to dim the luster of the heavenly light that shone upon his face in his last victory. To our lamented brother the city of Macon, Methodism, and our commonwealth owe a debt they can never pay. With a deep sense of our loss we sorrow with those loved ones at his own home, commending them to God; while with bared heads we lay a simple flower upon his tomb. May willing hands from many homes made bright and joyous through his unselfish labors weave garlands of imperishable glory to place upon his brow in the glad, good morning of that endless day.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except that of G. B. Allison, who was expelled.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Marcus Arrington. 1.

MARCUS ARRINGTON was born in Wilkes county, N. C., July 13, 1820; was converted under the ministry of Peter Cartwright at a camp meeting held in the neighborhood of Canton, Ill., and was there received into the Church. In February, 1844, he was licensed to preach, and received on trial in the Missouri Conference that fall. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Soyle at Booneville in 1851, and elder by Bishop Kavanaugh at Jefferson City in October, 1854, at which time he was also received into full connection. With the exception of four years spent in Arkansas during the war period, he was in active service in the St. Louis Conference until 1878, when he was made supernumerary, and in the following year was granted a superannuated relation, which he sustained until his death, which occurred at his home near Springfield, Mo., July, 1894. Brother Arrington was a man of clean hands and pure heart. The love of Christ constrained him, and under its impulse he counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of his Lord. In that period of the history of Methodism in Missouri when not only the mettle of men's souls was tried, but also the endurance of their physical nature, brother Arrington endured hardness as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. Through swamps and over mountains, fording rivers and threading forests, preaching in log cabins and under brush arbors, sharing the hardships of Missouri pioneers in the most sparsely settled districts of the state, he carried the words of this life with zeal that never faltered, courage that never failed, hope of success that ever inspired, and with many garnered sheaves attesting at once his power with God and man. He prayed not only in the home, but stopping his horse by the beaten track through the forests of the southeast or the mountains of the southwest portion of our Conference, he would be found in the attitude of prayer. Not naturally of the most cheerful disposition, he yet had a vein of humor, quiet but pointed, which made him socially a pleasant guest. He knew the children and they knew him. As a preacher he was spiritual and practical. While not blessed with early advantages, he always had with him good books which he read and circulated. He delighted in revivals of religion, and here he was seen at his best. His voice rang out like a trumpet, inviting sinners, encouraging penitents, comforting the mourners in Israel, and shouting victory when the hosts of evil were put to flight. The greater part of his ministry in our Conference was spent in the presiding eldership, for which he had adaptation. The preachers had in him a fatherly counselor, a sympathizing friend, who yet had the courage to point out their faults and the love that labored to correct them. Like all Methodist preachers, he shrank from the superannuated relation, but health impaired by long horseback rides, exposure to winter's cold and summer's heat, rendered it a necessity. When this was granted he removed to Springfield, where he awaited the end. Without dread of death's claims or fears of the unknown, he lingered till God said, "It is enough, come up higher," and he fell on sleep, that blessed sleep from which none ever wake to weep.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except those of R. L. Stanley, who was expelled from the ministry and communion of the Church, and D. J. Leake, who withdrew.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Garrett W. Martin, William G. Hensley, Andrew J. B. Foster, Samuel M. Parkes, Alexander Matthews, William P. Warren, John W. Register. 7.

GARRETT W. MARTIN was born in Robertson county, Tenn., August 4, 1808. His father, the Rev. Patrick Martin, belonged to a prominent and influential family, renowned among the earlier settlers of this state. His facilities for intellectual development were quite limited. By diligent and methodical study he soon gave evidence of superior mental ability. Every needed advantage was furnished in early life, by hard work in clearing forests and cultivating fields, to mature almost a perfect physical man: large, tall, strong, well-proportioned, and capable of great endurance, commanding in person, easy in manner, and indicating in every movement a man of strong character. Converted in early life and licensed to preach at the age of twenty years, his reading was extensive, and few of his age were more familiar with our standard theological writings. He gave much time to meditation and prayer. His sermons were prepared with careful fidelity, and preached with deliberate precision and force. Punctuality in filling all his appointments was characteristic of the man. Modesty and prudence were among the many excellent virtues of his life. Having a remarkably fine vein of ready wit and quiet humor, he was very attractive and entertaining in the social circle. He was never married. Such is the testimony of the venerable L. C. Bryan, his comrade in arms for more than half a century. Admitted on trial into the Tennessee Conference in October, 1834, his apprentice work in the itinerancy was on the Mt. Pleasant Circuit, Rev. James Tarrant in charge. In 1835-36 he was in charge of Mountain Mission, on the eastern border of our Conference. Then he served a year at Paducah, Ky., on the northwestern border. His fourth year was on Bear Creek Circuit, in North Alabama, on the state line of Mississippi. In 1838-39, he served Lawrence Circuit, in Alabama. McMinnville and Sparta Station was his next field of labor. After seven years' service in three states, in stations, on circuits, and a mission, from the center and around the circumference of our then large Conference, he was regarded as sufficiently seasoned and well suited for harder and heavier work on the Cumberland or Mountain District, where for four years he was found admirably adapted to the work of a presiding elder of that day, especially as a model manager of the mountain camp meetings where so many were converted. The Dover District was his field of toil and travel in 1845-49. He was stationed at Andrew Charge, College Hill, South Nashville, 1849-50; and in Edgefield, now East Nashville, in 1850-51; in 1851-52, Tusculum, Ala. In 1854 he was a delegate to the General Conference. For several years he was the financial agent for the Hanner High School. In 1858-59 he was stationed at Winchester, at Spring Hill in 1859-60, then two years at Cumberland Iron Works Station. Claiborne Chapel and City Mission, in Nashville, were given him to hold during the most trying period of the civil war. In 1865, after twenty-four successive years of service as station preacher, school agent, and presiding elder, and thirty-one years in the itinerancy, he was sent to the Red River Circuit, where he had been reared, and remained there for three of the four ensuing years. He served Clarksville Circuit in 1867-68; Pleasant Grove, 1869-70; White's Creek, 1870-72; and then returned to Pleasant Grove, where he continued three years; 1875-76, Saundersville; and then to his home on Red River again, where he labored for the full term of four years, passing his threescore and ten years among his own people, having been their pastor for seven out of fifteen successive years. Cheatham was his charge in 1880-83, either for three or four years. Nineteen successive years on circuits in his native and other counties near his home brought him to the end of fifty effective years in the itinerancy; then ten years of rest were given him in the retired ranks in which to make ready for the final roll call and the reward of the crown of righteousness. Rev. H. B. Reams, his presiding elder for two years preceding his departure, writes of the venerable and valiant man: "He was bright and very cheerful. There were sunlight and warm congeniality in his heart for the young as well as for the old; there were cheer and brightness in his face and joyous expressions on his lips for all who were about him. He never became embittered as some others have done. His spirit was Christ-like and beautiful. He was a true friend and wise counselor. His influence was strong and far-reaching. His last sermons at Martin's Chapel, Mt. Zion, delivered at Christmas and in January just before his death, February 2, 1894, were strong presentations of the truth and very full of comfort. His message of love to the Tennessee Conference at the last session was tender and touching. After receiving his message and hearing his assurances of eternal life, I left him trembling with emotion, weeping as a child, and rejoicing as only a saint can rejoice."

WILLIAM G. HENSLEY was born November 19, 1814; converted under the ministry of James Tarrant in 1829; joined the Tennessee Conference at Clarksville, Tenn., in 1840; married Miss U. A. Simpson in 1842, near Waterloo, Ala.; preached fourteen years in that part of the Tennessee Conference that was in North Alabama; lived five years in Athens, Ala.; three years in Murfreesboro, Tenn.; about twenty years at Cornersville, Tenn., serving contiguous charges. After his first appointment, Shoal Circuit, Ala., he served charges in order as follows: Wayne Circuit; Buffalo Mission; Dover Circuit; Madison Circuit, two years; Lawrence Circuit, two years; Trinity Circuit, two years; Rock Creek Circuit, two years; Lincoln Circuit; Duck River Circuit, two years; Lynnville Circuit, two years; Trinity Circuit, two years; Limestone Circuit, four years; Athens; Stone's River Circuit, four years; Murfreesboro; Cornersville; Pisgah Circuit; Richland Circuit, four years; Lynnville Circuit, two years; Williamsport, two years; Douglass Circuit, two years; South Side and Trinity; Hermitage Circuit; Asbury Circuit; Tobacco Port; Red River Circuit. He was granted a superannuated relation at Gallatin, Tenn., October, 1887, having done forty-seven years' effective work in the ministry. His last charge was Red River Circuit, Clarksville District. He died April 14, 1894. Perhaps no one in the Conference had a more fruitful ministry. Among his spiritual children are some of the foremost younger men in the ministry in this and other Conferences. Many of his converts are to be found in Tennessee and Alabama. One cannot go far through Middle Tennessee and North Alabama without finding warm admirers and spiritual beneficiaries of this noble soldier of Jesus Christ. Many stars are in his bright crown. As a doctrinal preacher few surpassed him. He was also exegetical and expository. In hortatory effort he was almost irresistible on occasion. If charity is the greatest thing in the world, he was one of the greatest men in the world. Being free from jealousy and self-seeking, he took pleasure in assisting his younger brethren, and the older as well, and rejoiced in their success. He delighted in hospitality, and was in his element when surrounded with a company of his ministerial brethren. His highest ambition was to do good. He loved and had implicit faith in his fellow-men, seeing the best side of humanity. He read extensively, and his mental powers were unabated. He remained cheerful and hopeful to the last. His faith never wavered. Speaking to his son of his life, he said that he had done his best. He did as much to affect his generation for God as any man of his day. William G. Hensley needs not to be carved in marble nor written in story to perpetuate his name. Tenderly he lives in the hearts of multitudes, whose children's children will repeat his name with reverence and love.

ANDREW J. B. FOSTER was born in September, 1812, in Maury county, Tenn.; and died in holy triumph at Winchester, Tenn., Sunday, October 14, 1894. His parents were among the early pioneers of Middle Tennessee. They were strict members of the Presbyterian Church, and young Andrew was brought up in this faith and communion. When a young man he learned the tailor's trade, and was engaged in this business in Columbia, Tenn., when he was powerfully converted in a revival held at the Methodist church in that town. His conversion was thorough and convincing, and he rejoiced aloud in the praises of God at the church, on the streets, in his shop, everywhere. The very first impulse of the young man's regenerated nature was to bring others to Christ; so, for some time after his conversion, he was punctual at prayer and class meetings, and both publicly and privately urged his friends and associates to accept the dear Saviour that he had found. During all this time he felt moved by the Holy Spirit to preach the gospel, but hesitated because of his limited education and a felt sense of his insufficiency for the work of the ministry. In the fall of 1841 he yielded to the call of God, received a license to preach, and was recommended by his Quarterly Conference to the ensuing Tennessee Annual Conference for admission into the traveling connection. This body received him on probation, and from that time he began a career of self-consecration and usefulness. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Soule in 1843, and elected an elder in 1848 at Huntsville, Ala. He remained on the effective list for ten years, during which time he traveled the Lebanon Circuit, Lawrence African Mission, Dover Circuit, Winchester Circuit, Savannah Circuit, Cypress African Mission, and Cypress Circuit. In 1851 he was granted a supernumerary relation, and in 1866 a superannuated relation. Brother Foster was thrice married. Miss Nancy Jones was his second wife, and two of their children survive him. In all the relations of life he was faithful. He was indeed a Christian gentleman; loved all, and hated none. He was a man of artless simplicity, honesty of purpose, true sincerity, and deep piety; and his burning zeal and unflinching fidelity made him one of our useful preachers, and in eternity many will rejoice that they ever heard his name. He lived by faith and on faith, and hence died in the faith. His end was as peaceful as a summer's sunset, and we doubt not that he now rests with his Lord.

S. M. PARKS was born in the year 1842, and died at Winchester, Tenn., January 5, 1894. Much of his life was given to the cultivation of his farm and making a living for his family. After becoming a mature man he professed saving faith in Christ, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and soon afterwards was licensed to preach. For four or five years he was a local preacher, putting in the best work that he could for the Master every Sunday. In October, 1877, he joined the Tennessee Conference, and traveled successfully the Salem, Marble Plains, Rich Valley, Wartrace, Hickory Creek, and Stone's River Circuits. On the different charges he did good work, building churches, raising collections, and saving souls. On all these lines he was a success, perfect reports being the rule with him. Not only was he a good worker and organizer, but he was a fine pastor and a splendid preacher. He knew and loved our doctrines and discipline. He was as familiar with Arminian theology as the average professor is with the classics. He preached and defended our doctrines with marked ability. He knew what religion was, theoretically and practically. He lived it every day, and was always prepared to give a reason for the hope that was in him. He bore about in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus, and adorned the doctrine of his Saviour by a godly walk and holy conversation. While traveling the Stone's River Circuit he was stricken with a paralytic trouble that at once and forever put an end to his active work in the cause he loved so well. He was forbidden to study, preach, or pray in public for several years. This to him was a sore bereavement indeed, but he bore it with all the fortitude possible. He was cheered with the faint hope that after awhile the old-time strength would come back, and bring with it the blessed privilege of again taking his place in the ranks of his brethren and preaching the everlasting gospel to men. But alas! he was doomed to disappointment. He died without a fear, his sun set behind a cloudless sky, and we buried him in the hope of a blessed resurrection.

ALEXANDER MATTHEWS died December 28, 1893, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. He was admitted into the Tennessee Conference on trial in 1837, and sent to Duck River Circuit as junior preacher; traveled a few years on trial, and located. He remained in the local ranks quite a number of years. In October, 1876, he was readmitted as a local elder, and sent to Gainesboro Mission. He traveled the Bedford Circuit two years. He was one year on Coffee Mission. He was on Short Mountain in 1881, Coke's Town in 1882. He worked on Hampton, Fountain Head, and Cookeville. On all of these he did faithful and efficient service. In 1885 he was granted a superannuated relation, which he held in great feebleness until his death. Brother Matthews was faithful and true. He had a sound and interesting Christian experience, lived a holy and happy life, and died in the triumph of Christian faith. In our Father's house are many mansions, and brother Matthews has gone to occupy one of those mansions forever. We revere and honor his memory.

WILLIAM P. WARREN was admitted on probation in the Tennessee Annual Conference in 1849. He was received into full connection in this Conference at Nashville, Tenn., in 1855, and at that time ordained a deacon in the Church of God by Bishop Kavanaugh. He was ordained an elder at Murfreesboro, Tenn., in 1857, by Bishop Early. He ceased to be effective in 1878, so that all the ministerial days of our brother, from his original probation to 1878, were twenty-nine years; and he rested from his labors and sustained a supernumerary relation to his Conference from that period till March 7, 1894, when, as we fondly hope, he was called from his humble home on earth to his everlasting home in heaven. The following charges were served by brother Warren: Bell Font Circuit, Madison African Mission, Reserve Circuit, Beaver Dam Mission, Lawrence Circuit, Lynnville Circuit, West Point Mission, Henryville Circuit, Lawrenceburg, Linden, and Lowryville Circuits. This record is very imperfect, but his record is on high, and we humbly trust that his spirit dwells with God.

JOHN W. REGISTER was born September 1, 1843; and died on his birthday, September 1, 1894. He said to his wife a few days before his death: "Sallie, on my birthday I will attend the largest meeting of my life." So, true to the day, he ceased to live on earth, but began the life eternal. Brother Register died in the faith of the gospel, and has entered upon his reward. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Conference in 1868. The places he there filled we do not know. He was, however, stationed at Memphis, Tenn., during the yellow fever epidemic, and remained at his post comforting and visiting the sick, pointing the dying to Christ, and committing the fallen ones to their last resting place. He was afterwards a presiding elder for eight years. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was admitted on trial into the traveling connection of the Tennessee Annual Conference at Columbia, in 1884. In the Centerville District he traveled the following charges: Goodrich, Waverly and McEwen, Centerville Station. He traveled in the Franklin District two years: Douglas Circuit, Nolensville Charge. At the last Conference he asked for a supernumerary relation, which was granted him. He died at White Bluff, Dickson county, Tenn., in peace with God and his fellow-men. Brother Register was married to Miss Sarah Gilman, February 23, 1865, and leaves a large family to mourn his departure from earth.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Josiah W. Whipple, William Shapard. 2.

JOSIAH W. WHIPPLE was born in Bennington, Vt., August 1, 1813; and died in Austin, Tex., May 8, 1894. His parents moved to northern Illinois when their children were young. Josiah was the oldest, and the first to embrace Christ and unite with the Methodist Church. His mother was a devout Christian, but his father had not then embraced the Saviour. The son was the priest of the family, and offered the daily sacrifice. Convinced that a dispensation of the gospel was committed unto him, he was licensed as a local preacher by Rev. John Clark, presiding elder of Chicago District, January 12, 1839. He was admitted into the Rock River Conference August 26, 1840, and appointed to Galena. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Morris, October 29, 1841, and transferred to the Texas Conference. The second session of that body was held in San Augustine, December 23, 1841. John Clark was appointed presiding elder of Rutersville District, and J. W. Whipple preacher in charge of Austin Circuit. The bishop and his two companions traveled on horseback to the Colorado river. The bishop preached in Austin, and introduced the new preacher to his charge. Austin Circuit embrace the Colorado valley on both sides of the river, and extended south almost to La Grange. The Comanches and other wild tribes were dangerous, but our brother knew no fear. Armed for defense and mounted on a magnificent horse, he made his way from settlement to settlement, preaching in the log cabins of the people, and laying broad and deep the foundation of the Methodist Church in Texas. Having served Austin Circuit two years, he was stationed in Houston, 1844-45. Then he labored on the Rutersville Circuit two years, and was appointed to Washington District. Then for many years he was engaged in district work, for which he was preëminently adapted. From Brownsville on the Rio Grande to the upper settlements on the Trinity river, he went preaching the gospel. On a camp ground he was in his element. Marshaling his forces as a skillful general, he would lead Zion's hosts to victory. With a voice loud and clear as a trumpet, he could be heard in the most distant parts of the encampment. He was most wonderfully gifted in prayer and exhortation. A congregation was often melted to tears by his opening prayer. "As a prince, he had power with God, and prevailed." His exhortations, coming from a burdened and burning heart, reached the hearts and consciences of men, and the slain of the Lord were many. Brother Whipple was thrice married. His first wife was Mrs. Sarah McGhee, of Bastrop county. She was an intelligent, faithful, Christian—"a helpmeet" indeed, making for her husband a happy home where for a short time he could rest from his itinerant toils. It pleased God sorely to afflict his servant. His only son, Wilbur Fisk, six years of age, was accidentally drowned by falling from a horse while fording the Colorado river. The bereaved mother soon followed her sainted boy to his heavenly home. He next married Miss Anna Rideout, at whose grave he and a surviving daughter wept. His third wife was Mrs. Sarah Dietrich. She and her son, Josiah W. Whipple, Jr., and the daughter of the former marriage, survive. Several years before brother Whipple's death his hearing became impaired. This increased until at length it was difficult to converse with him. Still desiring to be engaged in his loved employ, he for some years served Austin Circuit and Austin City Mission. One day he received an injury that put him on crutches for the rest of his life; yet he was cheerful—nay, more; in reading the Scriptures, meditation, and prayer he found an unfailing source of joy. His bereaved widow writes: "He was more cheerful than he had been for years. He was conscious to the last moment. He kissed us all and bade us good by, saying that God would bless us all, and take care of us as he had ever taken care of him; and then he quietly fell asleep in the arms of his Saviour." Thus at the age of eighty-one his life's labors ended; fifty-five years after his license to preach, fifty-four years after his reception into the itinerancy, and nearly fifty-three years after his arrival in Texas.

WILLIAM SHAPARD was born in Murfreesboro, Tenn., August 19, 1830, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of nineteen years. November 11, 1856, he was married to Miss Emily Hall. She and two sons and two daughters are left to weep for our departed brother. He was licensed to preach June 22, 1851, and admitted into the Tennessee Conference the same year. Having served the Rock Creek and Middleton Circuits while on trial, he was ordained deacon October 17, 1852, by Bishop Soule, and was sent to Edgefield Station. After faithful service in his mother Conference, he was transferred to the Memphis Conference, and stationed at Aberdeen, Miss., being subsequently transferred to the Alabama Conference, where he served faithfully and well the "Lord of the harvest." Among his charges in this Conference were Eufaula, Selma, Auburn, Marion, Eutaw, and Lowndesboro. In 1861 he answered the call for those who would stand for the "defense of home and native land," and went to the front, where he served bravely until failing health compelled him to accept a discharge. As soon as his health would permit he returned to his loved employ in the pulpit, and soon rose to great eminence as a preacher. The year 1872 found him pastor of St. Francis Church, Mobile, the ranking Church in the state. He came to the Texas Conference, and served St. John's Church 1876-77. From there he was sent to Tenth-street Church, Austin, where he labored and preached faithfully for three years, 1878-80, when failing health forced him to retire from the active work and take a supernumerary relation; but even in that relation, and though physically incapacitated for regular work, he often preached with unflinching earnestness and great acceptability. All who knew him found him to be an upright man, a great preacher, and a devoted Christian. Wherever he went, in all the Conferences to which he belonged, he took front rank as a preacher and leader. His preaching, in many places and on many occasions, was attended with signal victories; and there will no doubt be many to welcome him to the reward that he so richly deserved.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Gates, William E. Grant, John W. Crider, William F. Bain. 24.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Francis J. Boggs, John B. Laurens, James H. Pike, Thomas M. Beckham. 4.

FRANCIS JOHNSTON BOGGS was born in Greencastle, Pa., November 28, 1821. His father was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian Church, and a physician of prominence in his community. Francis—or Frank, as his intimate friends loved to call him—chose his father's profession, and began the study of medicine in his office, expecting to graduate at the Medical College in Philadelphia; but a Methodist revival in his native town thoroughly changed his nature and the whole plan of his life. He consecrated himself to Christ, entered by the new birth into the kingdom of God, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Believing that he was called of God to the ministry of the gospel, he gave up his chosen profession, was licensed to preach, and in the year 1846 he was admitted into the traveling ministry. His convictions and sympathies strongly drew him to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and he joined the Virginia Conference in November, 1848. In 1850 brother Boggs was married to Miss Anne Eliza Patteson, of Lynchburg, Va., daughter of Dr. John H. Patton, of precious memory. She was then, and for some years thereafter, in frail health, but was always a true helpmate to her husband, and God spared her life and gave her strength to minister to his comfort in his declining days. She survives him, a "widow indeed," bravely and faithfully filling her place as head of the deeply bereaved family. God gave them eight children, five of whom died in early life, and now have the companionship of their father in heaven. Two daughters and a son abide with their mother. Asbury Chapel, in Richmond city, was one of his first charges in the Virginia Conference. Here an extensive revival of religion crowned his ministry and blessed our Church in the metropolis of the state. That suburban charge so prospered that a larger and more attractive church soon took its place, which from that time has been known as Union Station. In recent years the growth of this church has been phenomenal. Its members, numbering nearly a thousand souls, have just completed, on the old site, one of the most substantial, commodious, and attractive houses of worship anywhere to be found in Southern Methodism. To the gratification of brother Boggs and of the good people of Union Station, he was present and took part both in the last services held in the old church and in the ceremonies connected with the laying of the corner stone of the new and beautiful edifice. Both before and after the late war brother Boggs was chaplain of the Seaman's Bethel, at Richmond; and no years of his ministerial life were more fruitful or gave him greater pleasure than those at the Bethel. He not only ministered to the sailors, but established a large Sunday school, and preached the word of life among a people who had not been accustomed to attend on divine worship. Bishop Early, who well knew his high character, appointed him to supply the place of a deceased presiding elder in the Western Virginia Conference, where for a year he discharged the duties of his office with fidelity and ability. His name is still remembered with affection in that district. Early in the late war he became a chaplain in the Confederate army, but soon accepted the captaincy of a company of young men to whom he was greatly attached, and with whom he had commanding influence. He was afterwards promoted to the rank of major of artillery, and in his military career illustrated some of the noblest qualities of our citizen soldiery. On the return of peace he took his place and resumed his "loved employ" as a Methodist preacher. Bishop Pierce transferred him to the Missouri Conference and stationed him in Jefferson City. He remained in Missouri five years, and besides the capital served the Church in Lexington and Kansas City. Referring to his ministry in the west, Bishop Granbery has said: "I can testify to the high appreciation in which he was held by preachers and people. Judge Ryland, General Ewing, and others have inquired of me about him with deep and tender interest, and have expressed in glowing terms their admiration and affection for him." In 1875 brother Boggs returned to the Virginia Conference, and was appointed to Madison Circuit two years; then to High-street Church, Petersburg, three years; then to the presiding eldership two years on Farmville District, and four years on Randolph Macon District. One year he served the Church at Salisbury, Md.; three years at Suffolk, and one year—the last of his effective ministry—on Bowling Green Circuit. While in Salisbury his health was seriously impaired. A severe and protracted spell of malarial fever shocked and shattered his constitution. There were signs of returning vitality, but the fond hopes of many hearts were doomed to perish. The fatal dart had pierced him. Bravely did he battle for life, and in "age and feebleness extreme" he filled his appointments, till a stroke of paralysis smote his feeble limbs with incipient death and took from his once fluent tongue the charm of eloquent speech. With perfect submission he accepted this painful decree of Divine Providence, and in November, 1891, he sought and received the relationship of a superannuated preacher. From that time his home was in Ashland, and it is not too much to say that the whole town and Church honored him. He had a kind look and a cheerful word for everybody. He knew how to grow old gracefully, and retained to the last his cheerful humor. His faith and resignation failed not for a moment. His love of the brethren and of the cause of Christ continued fresh and strong. His physical powers waned, his steps became less steady, his hearing duller, his speech less distinct; but his gentle, genial temper made his society a joy to the last. The Sunday before his death he occupied his chair within the chancel of the college chapel, but he did not hear well. The avenues of earthly intercourse were closing. On Wednesday following, January 3, 1894, a very bright, mild day, he arose early, read until breakfast, then started to the post office. He had just entered the college campus, when he sank, rather than fell, to the ground, and probably lost consciousness at that instant. His daughter, Fannie, who had been watching him from the window, ran to his assistance. Four students of the college hastened to help, and gently bore him to his bed. In a few moments, without a struggle or a gasp, he passed away. In an eloquent tribute to his memory, Bishop Granbery has said: "It is not difficult to describe his leading traits; they impressed us at first sight, and grew on us with closer acquaintance. By birth, disposition, and culture he was a gentleman. Courtesy, refinement, a delicate regard for the feelings and rights of others, the union of self-respect with modesty, and of dignity with ease, were conspicuous in his spirit and manner. His cheerful spirit, vein of humor, affability, and ready sympathies made him eminently a companionable man. His tongue did not sin in speaking evil, nor his ears in listening to it. He had a generous, loving heart. He showed himself friendly, and made friends everywhere." His remains were laid to rest in the Ashland cemetery. Brethren and friends from many places attested, by their presence and tearful interest, their devotion to his memory.

JOHN BAPTIST LAURENS died at his home in Ashland, Va., May 17, 1894. He was a native of Virginia, born in Culpeper county, January 19, 1827. His father was born in France. His mother, Ruth Ricketts, of Rappahannock county, Va., was a Methodist. Young Laurens was baptized into the Catholic Church by the priest of his father. He lost both parents at an early age. He became concerned for his soul's safety in his youth. Before twelve years old, in Winchester, Va., under the ministry of Rev. Norval Wilson (father of Bishop Wilson), he came into our Church, a convert. While a soldier in Mexico his faith faded. It was renewed at a camp meeting near Amissville, Va., in 1850. In 1853 he became a licentiate in our Conference, and served King William Circuit. He wrought on various charges. His last pastorate was Hampton. At times he was halted by disease, the army life in Mexico having permanently injured his health. At the beginning of the civil war he was a captain in the Confederate forces, but his health failed, and he resigned. He became agent for the Soldiers' Tract Society, and for two years after the war he was agent of the Preachers' Relief Society. In 1856 he married Miss Maria Cooke, of King and Queen county, a lady of superior mind, wise zeal, and kind heart. In whatever position he was placed, energy, prudence, devotion to duty were displayed. There were always sheaves. The church buildings were improved, new edifices erected, parsonage property bettered, and, best of all, converts. He was engaged in a number of notable revivals, and conducted camp meetings which were Pentecostal occasions. All the while bad health hindered. In 1877 he became too diseased for an appointment. His lungs were attacked, hemorrhages ensued, and his voice failed him. At the Conference of that year Dr. Bennett, the senior editor of the Advocate, went from the paper. Dr. Whitehead, in a sketch of "Uncle Larry," says: "When brother Laurens was in despair of something to do, without home or means of support, Dr. Lafferty employed him as assistant in the office of the Richmond Christian Advocate. Journalism he knew nothing about, was not ready with his pen, and seemed entirely out of place in a newspaper office; but Divine Providence had brought him thither for a special work." Brother Laurens grew in facility with the pen. The variety, aptness, and attractiveness of his "Letters to the Children" were marked.

The editor desired brother Laurens to count himself as connected with the paper, whether he should grow free of illness or remain an invalid. The care he could take of himself, the freedom from public speaking, the agreeable environment, soon brought improvement to his condition. In a year or so he could visit the Churches, though unable to preach. While connected with the Advocate he turned his attention to the children, and, starting with a mite society originated in the family of the Rev. Thomas H. Campbell, of our Conference, he nourished this tiny plant till its boughs bore fruit among the heathen beyond the Pacific Sea, also in the land of the Aztecs and among the red men of the plains. The story of how this broken soldier of the Church militant mustered the thousands of infants of our homes into bands of Rosebuds has become a thrilling and engaging tale, known to the utmost verge of Methodism and beyond. The recruits at first were few; the finances were numbered in nickels. By inviting the letters of the tiny tots to the paper; by exhortations, short, stirring, simple; by organization; by personal visits, the Church saw, with glad wonder, a children's crusade for Christ that seemed marshaled by magic and moved by magnetism. The gifts went up to $55,000. The missionary training of our boys and girls cannot be reckoned up by any arithmetic of coin. They have been taught from the cradle that concern for others is an imperial duty and a chief joy. The little men and women have erected a college in the country he campaigned in and conquered when a lad for the children of the men he met in battle around Monterey. This old man, vexed by maladies, was not allowed to do his work without obstacles. There was outcry made to the editor that "Uncle Larry" was taking up too much space in the paper on children. Then others of the sect of Pharisees claimed that he was "making children too prominent." He was scolded for printing these letters. Then there were predictions that the society would be short-lived; that the children would soon tire of giving their pennies. Then he was vilely assailed in letters sent to the Advocate, but flung in the fire; and there was bitter speech against his methods, but the venerable man of God—bedridden in agony—committed his cause to God, and let them rail. Satan hindered. That is his business. God blessed his work. In the city of Monterey, in Mexico, is the Instituto Laurens (his monument), a noble edifice, equipped with faculty and instruments of education, supported by the Rosebuds of the Virginia Conference and erected by their mites. At his death a debt of $2,000 overhung it. The Rosebuds, in a few months, cut it down $800 without subtracting anything from their regular contributions. His maladies were many, and menacing to his life. For lungs he had but fragments of breathing spaces. His stomach was worn out. Fifteen years before his death an eminent physician of Richmond, after examination, gave him six months of life. The knife opened the great cavity of the body time and again to remove obstructions threatening immediate death. He survived these major surgical operations to the amazement of the medical faculty. His case was reported to the journals of surgery—a wonder to the profession. His survival was a miracle. The tiny hands of babes and sucklings uplifted to God arrested the javelin of death. When movement from room to room of his house seemed the utmost of his bodily powers, his resolute spirit forced the feeble frame to journey many hundreds of miles to the capital of the Mexican republic, and remain for days attending to the business of the children's work. While the great senate of the Southern Church was in session in Memphis he was summoned to the supernal synod of "just men made perfect," where Gabriel and Michael count it an honor to be doorkeepers and servitors. He never had a vote for our Church legislature. How few of that body will be known in the ages where his fame, like a buoyant wonder, will survive the oblivion of even notable names! During the General Conference in Richmond the chief men of our Methodism got a glimpse of millennial glory. On one Sabbath afternoon, in the Academy of Music, thousands of Rosebuds attended, and carried to success a programme of deepest interest. On the platform were the mighty men of our Israel. The one figure that caught all eyes was a tottering old man with flowing beard, presiding over the vast assembly of little children—"Uncle Larry." The orators, statesmen, editors of our Church, gave him reverence, and saluted the most marked man of Providence in our bounds. It was an ovation without a parallel in our history. It is needless to add, he lived a life of honor, godliness, and stern integrity. He died in peace.

JAMES HENDERSON PIKE, son of Joseph and Sallie Pike, was born in Patrick county, Va., December 3, 1858. He married Miss Mary L. Fulcher, daughter of John Fulcher, who, with three small children, survives him—one little boy having preceded him to the better land. Brother Pike was converted and received into the Methodist Church at Creasey's Chapel, on Patrick Mission, in the year 1877. The circumstances of his parents allowed him little opportunity of education. A plain schooling in the elementary branches was all that was given him. They were living on a little mountain farm, and reared fourteen children—eleven sons and three daughters. One of these sons is a minister in the Baptist Church; two others are ministers in the Methodist Church, and belong to the Southwest Missouri Conference. While there were many seemingly insurmountable difficulties besetting him, he had a great thirst for knowledge, and applied himself as well as he could, having to work to help support the family, and only able to attend the public schools a few months in the winter. Without the privilege of theological training, acquiring knowledge was made rather difficult, yet he struggled on amid all these disadvantages, preparing himself for his life-work. Brother Pike was a man of deep piety; naturally very diffident, he did not show his real worth. One had to be intimately acquainted with him to know his true value. To live right and to do good was his great desire while laboring with us. He was licensed as a local preacher by the Quarterly Conference of Patrick Circuit in 1889, and was employed by the presiding elder during a portion of the year to preach in the northwestern part of Patrick county. In November of that year he was admitted on trial into the Virginia Conference, held in Richmond, and sent to West Chesterfield Mission. In 1890 he was sent to West Franklin Mission, where he remained two years; thence to Meadows of Dan Mission. His last appointment was to East Halifax Circuit. On his way to the District Conference at Stuart he stopped at his father-in-law's, and was stricken down with typhoid fever, which terminated his life. To the members of his family he spoke frequently of his resignation to the will of the Lord, strong faith in the Son of God, assurance of acceptance with God. Love, tender and thoughtful, to all his brethren, deep interest in the welfare of his Sunday schools and churches—these were manifested continually. On the morning previous to his death he called his wife and children, and all that were in the house, to his bedside, and prayed an earnest prayer. It was the last time he conducted family worship with them. The next morning, August 10, 1894, he was worshipping with the angels. A short while before he died he sang one of his favorite choruses, "Saviour, wash me in the blood, and I shall be whiter than the snow." Thus passed away a good and true man of God.

THOMAS MOORE BECKHAM was born in Lexington, Davidson county, N. C., March 21, 1835; and on Sunday, November 11, 1894, his pure spirit returned to God. He was the son of John G. and Mary C. Beckham. Though North Carolina was the state of his birth, the greater part of his youth was spent in Virginia, and he was educated at the Warren Green Academy and Randolph-Macon College. In 1863 he entered the Virginia Conference, traveling as the colleague of Jacob Manning. He served in succession the circuits of Rockingham, Greene, King and Queen, Burkeville, Mecklenburg, Cartersville, Lunenburg, Bedford Springs, Amherst, Appomattox, and again Burkeville.

In 1866 he was married to Miss Lucy E. Royall, of Nottoway county, who survives him. The fruits of this union were five children, of whom one—the late Samuel Royall Beckham—died in Roanoke, Va., in 1891, leaving a name fragrant for piety and loveliness of character; and another is now a member of this Conference. Brother Beckham was a man of spotless life. His great patience amid unusual trials; his uncomplaining acceptance of fields of labor where the work was hard and the support meager; his sweetness of temper, springing from perfect trust in God, all marked him out as a man of deep piety and full consecration to God. He was a man of fine native intellect. This no one could doubt that marked his well-shaped head, his broad forehead, and his expressive face. In the social circle he was a charming man; and the refinement of his manners, the tenderness of his sympathy, and the sweet and mellow flavor of his piety made him acceptable at once to the most cultured and the humblest of households. As a revivalist he was more than ordinarily successful. It is estimated that the conversions on his various fields of labor aggregate a thousand; and this estimate is conservative. He was not, however, satisfied with mere ingatherings. The convert was trained. Private and family prayer, the study of God's word, the Church paper, and Christian living—all were insisted upon. He sought to build only gold, silver, and precious stones into the temple of God. As a letter-writer brother Beckham was gifted. His style was easy, flowing, and lucid. A letter of his describing the ever memorable Conference of 1874 at Elizabeth City, N. C., and giving his impression of Bishop Marvin, is preserved in the "Life and Labors of Bishop Marvin," by Dr. T. M. Finney. Its estimate of the sainted Marvin is one of the best that have appeared. But of all his gifts, perhaps the one that most inured to the glory of God was his deep and sincere sympathy for suffering men and his fervent love for lost sinners. It is rare to find one so faithful as he was in private exhortation. When he met a man he must find out whether or not he was a follower of Christ. This point being decided in the negative, an earnest and solemn appeal immediately followed. The servant that kindled his fire in the morning, the stranger that handed him a cup of cold water, the chance traveler whom he encountered by the roadside, seldom or never failed to hear some faithful warning and kind exhortation; and these things made him the loved friend of hundreds and the instrument of salvation to many more. Among the deepest and sincerest mourners over his coffin were the negroes who knew him as a friend and loved him as a father. During the past Conference year his health grew so bad that he was forced to seek constant medical treatment. The kindness of many friends enabled him to pass several months at the Retreat for the Sick, in the city of Richmond. He left much improved, but his condition became so serious that a return was considered necessary. On Saturday, November 10, he seemed better, but on Sunday morning at about seven o'clock, after taking a quieting draught, he fell asleep, and from that slumber he passed peacefully to his eternal rest. Among those to whom the King at his coming shall say, "Well done," not the least will be our modest, gentle, conservative brother, Thomas Moore Beckham. Earth furnishes no sublimer spectacle than such a life as this. The beauty of holiness shines in it; the transforming power of divine grace was fully illustrated. A Church filled with such men would smite Satan's head and win the world for Christ.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Homer S. Thrall, Eli Y. Seale, John C. Ballard. 3.

HOMER S. THRALL was born in Vermont, December 19, 1819. He was converted in 1837. He was educated at Ohio Wesleyan University, and from that institution he went into the itinerant ministry. The Ohio Wesleyan University conferred upon him the degree of A.M. in 1850, and the Southwestern that of D.D. in 1884. The following are the appointments he served, as taken from the minutes of the several Annual Conferences: He was received on trial in the Ohio Conference in 1840. His first charge was Little Kanawha, with Orville C. Shelton as senior preacher. In 1841, Summerville, with J. W. Southward as junior preacher. He was admitted into full connection and ordained deacon in 1842, was transferred to the Texas Conference, and stationed at Brazoria. In 1843, Egypt Circuit, with W. S. Hamilton as junior preacher. In 1845 he was ordained elder, and stationed at Bastrop. In 1846-47, at Austin, where he built our first church in that city. In 1848, Washington; 1849-50, Galveston; 1851-52, Victoria and Lavaca; 1853, Bible Agent; 1854, Rutersville District; 1855-57, Galveston District; 1858, Austin District; 1859, La Grange and Colored Mission; 1860-61, Columbus District; 1862-64, Victoria District; 1865, Columbus Station; 1866, the West Texas Conference having been organized, he was appointed to Indianola and Colored Charge; 1867, Victoria and Lavaca; 1868, transferred to the Texas Conference; 1869, Houston Circuit; 1870, Navasota; 1871-72, Brenham; 1873, Chappell Hill District; 1874, Chappell Hill; 1875, transferred to the West Texas Conference, and stationed in San Antonio; 1876-77, San Antonio; 1878-79, Corpus Christi; 1880, San Marcos; 1881, Luling; 1882-85, San Antonio District; 1886-89, Seguin; 1890, Del Rio; 1891, superannuated, and has since resided in San Antonio, where he died October 12, 1894. Dr. Thrall was twice married; first to Miss Amanda J. Kerr, June 27, 1847, who lived but a few years. His second marriage was to Mrs. Amelia L. West, July 21, 1852, who survives him, and who, in the evening of life, separated from him whom she loved and served for more than forty years, will have the prayers and sympathy of the Church. The fact that a man has given fifty-four years of life to the one work of preaching the gospel, from which he never turned aside for a day, never seeking release from its obligations and sacrifices, is sufficient to arrest attention and awaken thought. Dr. Thrall lived and labored for fifty-four years, and during a period in many respects the most eventful and interesting in the world's history. It is the period of the greatest inventions, and the most wonderful developments, social, political, and religious, known to the history of mankind. When brother Thrall came to Texas as a missionary the state was comparatively a wilderness, the people few and scattered in far-distant localities; many of the great cities of the state had no existence; even San Antonio, where he lived and died, was but a small village. The future historian of the Church in Texas cannot fail to make honorable mention of Dr. Thrall. He is identified with the history of the Church and the state. Dr. Thrall combined in a remarkable degree the characteristics of the minister of the gospel and those of the versatile man of affairs. He was the impersonation of the religious and the secular in happy union. He never sacrificed his high calling to secular pursuits, and he never sought preferment in the state. But he was deeply and conscientiously interested in everything pertaining to the welfare of the country, and especially the state of his adoption. He loved Texas with the ardor of a patriot, and served her as one of her most loyal and devoted sons. He knew the fathers of the republic—Generals Houston, Rusk, President Lamar, and others; was on intimate terms of friendship with them all, and was personally acquainted with every governor the state has had. From his pen we have one of the best histories of the state. Dr. Thrall was a man of fine culture, and to the last his mind was active. As an author he was read by his contemporaries, and will be by the generation that succeeds him. His "History of Texas" has had a large circulation, and his "History of Methodism in Texas," while not claiming to be full or exhaustive, is the best we have, and invaluable to the student of ecclesiastical history in this great state. He wrote much for the press, and while upon his sick-bed during the year 1894 he dictated articles for the San Antonio Express which commanded the admiration of all who read them. Dr. Thrall was granted the superannuated relation by his Conference in the fall of 1891. It was to him probably the saddest day in his long and useful life. He had endured trials and sufferings known only to the pioneer preacher living upon a mere pittance, exposed to the perils of Indians, sleeping often upon the bare earth, but the day he laid aside the armor was the hardest, saddest of all. He retired to his home in San Antonio, but his activity continued unabated. He preached whenever occasion offered, contributed to the press, and took part in local Church enterprises. A cataract had closed one of his eyes, and the other was threatened in the same way. An unsuccessful operation left him in total darkness. Old and feeble and blind, he did not lose heart or hope, but continued cheerful and contented. No word of complaint or of impatience was heard to pass his lips. During the long and weary months in which he was confined to his bed he seemed to grow more resigned and loving, manifesting the greatest kindness to all, and expressing supreme love to God, and earnest desire and prayer for the salvation of men. He gradually grew weaker during the present year, and at the last quietly and gently fell on sleep.

ELI YOUNG SEALE was born in Tuscaloosa county, Ala., December 4, 1824; and died in great peace at Floresville, Tex., April 12, 1894. On December 12, 1844, he was married to Mary J. Jones, who was indeed a helpmeet for him, sharing the extremes of mortal life with unflinching fidelity. Brother Seale professed religion in 1847, and soon thereafter began to exhort, and subsequently to preach—about the year 1853. He joined the Texas Conference at Austin in 1858, and fell to the Rio Grande Mission Conference in 1859. We regret our inability to give a list of the appointments served by him, but it is perhaps enough to say that in all good fidelity he served the Church as pastor and presiding elder until the day of his superannuation. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Pierce and elder by Bishop Marvin. Brother Seale was a good man, a genial companion and true friend, and his death was regarded as a public calamity. The whole community turned out to do him honor when he was laid away to rest until the resurrection morn.

JOHN C. BALLARD was born in Georgia, September 28, 1858. He moved with his parents to Texas when a small boy, and spent the most of his life in Caldwell county. He was converted and joined the Church in his childhood. He was licensed to preach in 1887 by the Quarterly Conference of the Harwood Circuit. He was admitted on trial in this Conference at Seguin in 1889, and appointed to Ingram Mission, where he remained two years, whence he was sent to the London Circuit and served that charge one year, followed by one year on the Fredonia Circuit. At the last session of our Conference he was appointed to Pontotoc Circuit; he went at once to the charge, and had but fairly entered upon his work when he was attacked suddenly and unexpectedly with hemorrhage from the lungs. From that time his health failed rapidly until August 25 of this year, when in the full triumphs of faith he passed to his reward. Brother Ballard was an humble, devoted Christian, one of the most self-sacrificing, earnest, and faithful of men. As a preacher he was growing; his educational advantages had been limited, but he was a hard student and had taken up a course of literary studies this year. He gave promise of much usefulness, and while his ministerial life was short it was well spent. His memory and his influence for good still live on the charges which he served. Many will rise up in eternity and call him blessed.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

J. D. AUSTIN was born in Syracuse, N. Y., January 25, 1836. He was licensed to preach more than thirty years ago and served the Church acceptably in the local ranks. He served as supply on circuits two years in the Northwest Texas Conference; one year on Mt. Hope Circuit, Western Conference, and was admitted on trial into the Western Conference of the M. E. Church, South, at Wyandotte, Kans., August 29, 1888, and appointed to Council Grove Circuit, which circuit he served acceptably four years. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop Hendrix at Atchison, Kans., August 31, 1889, and elder by Bishop Hendrix at Council Grove, Kans., September 4, 1892. At this Conference Bishop Hendrix appointed him to Parsons Circuit. September 4, 1893, he was appointed to the same charge by Bishop Haygood. Taking sick early in the year, he did but little work. March 9, 1894, he went to Council Grove to arrange to move to that place, but growing worse every day, he was soon too feeble to go about. Stopping at the parsonage until March 19, he passed to his reward. He died among friends and in the happy faith of a blessed reward. His last testimony in regard to the future was: "It's all right; if God takes me to glory, I'll go shouting, 'I know in whom I have believed.'" Brother Austin was perhaps better known and had more warm friends in Morris county than anywhere else. The new churches at Kelso and Moss Springs are living monuments of his enterprise and love for his work. A more faithful man to his work and to his God is seldom found. Those who knew him best loved him most. His friends were many within and out of the Church. A difference of opinion never made him an enemy, but by kind words he sought to win the people to the true faith. On Tuesday, March 20, his remains were conveyed to Kelso, and in the church which was the pride of his heart and which had been tastefully decorated by loving hands, the funeral services were held, after which the Masonic fraternity took charge, and in a plat of ground selected by himself he was buried with the usual formalities. The funeral attendance was one of the largest ever called together in Morris county.

CASWELL W. KING, son of Charles and Barbara King, was born in Guilford county, N. C., March 5, 1829; and died at his home near Pleasant Garden, Guilford county, N. C., October 4, 1894. He married Mary S. Fentress, daughter of Frederick and Maria Fentress, of Guilford county, December 4, 1864. Ten children were born to them, of whom three sons and one daughter, with the bereaved wife and mother, survive. He was converted and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Raleigh, 1846, under the ministry of the Rev. F. S. Campbell. In 1854 he was licensed to preach by the Rev. D. B. Nicholson, presiding elder, and was admitted into the North Carolina Conference at Pittsboro in the fall of 1854. He was appointed to the following charges: In 1855, Mattamuskeet Circuit, junior preacher; 1856, Davidson Circuit; 1857, Stanley Circuit; 1858, Halifax Circuit; 1859, Nashville Circuit; 1860, Rocky Point Circuit; 1861-63, Mission in Nash county; 1864, South Guilford Circuit; 1865, Cumberland Circuit; 1866, Troy Circuit; 1867, Uwharrie Circuit; 1868, Kingston Circuit; 1869, North Guilford Circuit; 1870, Pleasant Garden Circuit; 1871, Hatteras Mission; 1872-73, superannuated; 1874, High Rock Mission; 1875-80, superannuated; 1881-84, Dan River Mission; 1885, superannuated; 1886, Antioch Mission; 1887, Deep River Mission; 1888-94, superannuated. He was ordained deacon at Greensboro, in 1856, by Bishop Early, and was ordained elder in 1858, by Bishop Kavanaugh. Brother King was a man of energy and industry. He was never idle. After he was superannuated he traveled and sold Bibles and other good books, and preached when an opportunity was afforded. He was a very congenial companion, so humble, so pure, so good, so sweet-spirited. His conversation was ever about heaven, Christ, and the Church. He talked religion wherever he went. Truly he was a spiritually-minded man. He was charitable in his conversation. He had that charity that thinketh no evil, but always puts the best construction on the motives and conduct of others. Brother King was very anxious to get work last fall at Charlotte. He seemed very much disappointed when he failed to get an appointment, but after he was taken sick he saw the wisdom of the brethren in not giving him work. After Christmas he spent a few days in Greensboro, when he made arrangements to engage in mission work during the year. He began his work there on the first Sunday of January. He came home the following week, and while at home he was stricken with sub-acute rheumatism. He had been troubled with Bright's disease for a number of years. His lungs were also affected. With this combination of diseases his sufferings were very great. For ten months he had to endure the most excruciating pain. Not a limb, joint, or muscle was free from pain; but amid it all he would sing, and often shout the praises of God. From the first he did not think that he would ever be well again, but he had no anxiety about the matter. He was patient, cheerful, and resigned. He said: "Tell the brethren of the Conference that I am interested in them, am praying for them, and that all is well with me." Some weeks before his death, at his request, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to him. During the service he would rejoice and praise God. "His Christian life glowed with increasing luster and his experience in the things of God grew richer as he approached the end. While the outward man was perishing the inward man was renewed day by day, until the weary wheels of life stood still." He was conscious all through his sickness until about three weeks before his death, when he commenced having convulsions. After this he seemed to be in a stupor most of the time, and talked but little. Once, after he had had a hard convulsion, he said, "I thought the Saviour had come for me." He had to wait only a few days more until the Saviour did come and take his spirit home.

CANARO D. SMITH was born in Buncombe county, N. C., April 1, 1813; and died January 29, 1894. During his boyhood public schools were unknown in the state, and subscription schools in the community where he lived were rare and of short duration; yet he succeeded in acquiring a knowledge of the ordinary branches of an English education and a considerable amount of general information, by his twentieth year. Had his means and opportunities corresponded with his capacity for culture, his attainments would have been second to those of but few men in the state; and if in early life he could have pursued his favorite scientific predilections, his name would have been famous in North Carolina, if not in the world, in scientific circles, on account of his eminence in geological and mineralogical studies. In business he was energetic, persevering, and successful. He was converted in September, 1836, at Caney River camp meeting, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. In June, 1837, he was licensed to preach, and the following October was admitted on trial in the Holston Conference. He was appointed junior with Rev. Daniel Payne on the La Fayette Circuit, in North Georgia. He diligently sought to remedy the deficiencies of his earlier education by studying those branches most intimately connected with pure English, while pursuing the prescribed curriculum of the Conference. His progress was rapid. His next appointment was Lebanon Circuit, Va. Exposure to a rigorous climate and daily preaching brought on throat troubles. He was then appointed agent for Holston College, New Market, Tenn. In 1840-41 he traveled the Wytheville Circuit. His next appointment was Jonesboro Circuit, in Tennessee. During the year nearly eight hundred were added to the Church. At the ensuing Conference he was made financial agent of Emory and Henry College. His next appointment was Wytheville Circuit, and in 1845 Athens Station; 1846-47, Rogersville Circuit; 1848, Rogersville District; 1849-50, Greenville District. In 1850 he was a member of the General Conference. On September 21, 1847, he was happily married to Miss Margaret R., daughter of Capt. M. D. Bearden, of Knox county, Tenn., who became a helpmeet indeed to him: gentle, mild, and kind, attractive in body, mind, and character, she became the light of his home, where her influence, like nature's silent yet mighty forces, became a potent factor in life and destiny, and contributed much to the happiness of the home they built, and the interesting family of children reared to honor and usefulness. She still survives to mourn his departure. The heavy work on the Greenville District completely broke down his health, and he was compelled to take the supernumerary relation. In 1853 he accepted the agency of the American Colonization Society for Tennessee, which position he held but a few months. Having from his youth had a taste for mineralogical and geological research, he had for years in view the establishing the harmony between the Bible properly interpreted and geology rightly understood. Now, having been debarred pastoral work, and as occasion offered exercising his gifts as a local elder, he more fully committed himself to scientific research. This proved an inspiration to health, developed his scientific knowledge, and led to the discovery of corundum and a number of valuable minerals hitherto unknown to North Carolina's mineralogical possessions. A few years before his death he was readmitted into the Conference, but his health was such that his name continued on the roll of supernumeraries until the close of his life. A little over a year preceding his death he was seriously disabled by a fall from his horse, while alone crossing the Nantahala Mountains, and where he lay all night until found at 9 or 10 o'clock the next day. He had but partially recovered when he was attacked with la grippe in January last, and in less than a week it ran its fatal course. In all the relations of life brother Smith was a true man; he was a broad-minded citizen. In 1861 he was a member of the Constitutional Convention of North Carolina. As an expert mineralogist and a man well informed on current topics, he contributed no little to the development of the state, especially its western division. As a preacher, in the noontide of his power he ranked with the foremost men of his Conference. Hiwassee College honored itself by conferring on him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity. He was a well-rounded man, largely endowed with social qualities, and blessed with a disposition to communicate, and capacity for expressing himself clearly. He was entertaining in the social circle, pointing his conversation with anecdotes and illustrations drawn from a rich and almost inexhaustible fund. With charity for his imperfections and admiration for his excellences, we cherish the hope of meeting him again in the "by and by."

WILLIS STOUT HALTOM was born in Montgomery county, N. C., October 8, 1808; and died March 31, 1894, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. In early life he availed himself of all possible educational advantages, which in that day were meager and difficult. When the time came for him to leave the parental roof he was equipped for life's duties. In 1834 he was admitted on trial in the South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which at that time embraced a large portion of Piedmont North Carolina. His first appointment was near Sumter, S. C., and for years he filled important appointments in that section of the Palmetto state. In 1862 he removed to North Carolina, and in 1863 traveled the Concord Circuit. When in 1870 the Conference line was conformed to the state line, he remained in this territory, filling some of the best appointments, and where precious memories still linger fresh and green. In 1878 he was superannuated, and remained in that relation honored and loved until God called him home. Soon after entering the ministry brother Haltom was married to Miss Norwood, daughter of Hon. Thomas Norwood, of Montgomery county, N. C. One daughter survives—Mrs. Bradshaw, of Charlotte, N. C. His wife, whom he ardently loved and whose departure he did not cease to mourn, left him on Easter Sunday five years before his death. He was impressed that he would die on or about Easter, and on that Sunday, a few days before his death, while partially asleep, he was heard to say: "Four years and eleven months, wife, since you left me. I can't be with you this Easter, but I will not be far behind; wait for me." He was ripe for heaven and anxious for the change. He was in the active work forty years, and an honored superannuate for twenty years. Thousands were brought to Christ through his ministry. His great-grandfather was a Baptist minister, and his father a great worker in the Church. His life itself was a sermon. Rarely ever was there to be found such a noble and happy combination of fun, wit, sense, and goodness. While he was not a great preacher, he was above the average—a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. He was gifted in prayer, and at times rose to sublime heights in his praises and devotions. To the last he was the same genial, happy Christian he had been through all the years. His conversations concerning his departure were as though he were about to make a visit to some dear friend. He gave directions for his funeral, and said to a brother minister: "I am soon going to take a journey, and I want to say to you now that I have no choice between lying down on this bed or in my grave. I am afraid that if I commit sin now it is in being too anxious to go. When I am gone, if you can say anything good about me and tell the truth, I shall be glad; but if not, sing a hymn and lay me to rest. Sing at the church that sweet old hymn, 'I am going home to die no more.' When you have laid me to rest in my grave, and it has been filled, and you have done all, let the last thing be to sing, 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.'" We laid him in Elmwood cemetery, and as we sang the doxology, as he requested, we felt like praising God that he had given the world such a useful life and peaceful, triumphant death as Father Haltom's. May we live the life of the righteous, and may our last end be like his!

ELISHA JAMES EUDAILY was born March 20, 1826, in Charlotte county, Va.; and died May 11, 1894, at his home near Wilkesboro, N. C. Early in life he became concerned about his spiritual condition, and was for some time an earnest seeker of religion, but was not fully satisfied as to his acceptance with the Lord. At length, however, he professed saving faith in Christ, and ever afterwards his Christian experience was clear and bright. We do not know when he joined the Church, nor when he was licensed to preach. He served the Church for some years as a local preacher. He joined the North Carolina Conference in 1876, at Greensboro, and was sent to Stokes Circuit. His next appointment was Wilkes Circuit, where he remained two or three years. After an absence of two or three years he was returned to Wilkes Circuit, where he labored faithfully until his health gave way, and he was granted a supernumerary relation. In this relation he did what he could to advance the Redeemer's kingdom by giving of his means to support the gospel, and as his feeble health would permit by preaching its unsearchable riches, encouraging believers, and calling sinners to repentance. He had been twice married, and leaves a wife and one child. A few weeks before his death he preached his last sermon in a beautiful church near his own home, in the erection of which he had been the chief instrument. When his end drew near he seemed to be conscious of the fact; told his wife that he felt sad at the thought of leaving her, but that he was not troubled about himself, for he had faith in Christ and felt that all would be well with him. A few hours before he died he selected 1 Thessalonians iv. 14 as the text for his funeral discourse. Thus our faithful brother passed away from friends and loved ones here below to friends and loved ones above, where they never say "good-by." His earthly mission is ended; he worked faithfully and well in the vineyard of the Lord. He is held in high esteem among those with whom he labored, and is loved much by those who knew him well and knew him best.

Ques. 18. Who are superannuated? R. A. Cloughton, Samuel Black, J. T. Johnson, W. Briscoe, Elias Kendall, C. S. Murrill, J. K. Hedges, W. R. Chambers. 8.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? Greenville S. McCutchen. 1.

GREENVILLE S. McCUTCHEM, son of Jones McCutchen, was born February 28, 1818, in Greenbrier county, W. Va.; and died August 25, 1894, in Newark, being seventy-six years and five months of age. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church October 4, 1834. He married Miss Elizabeth Kincaid, February 23, 1843. He was licensed to preach in 1846 or 1848, and joined the Conference in the fall of 1854. During the war he studied medicine, and for several years he engaged in the practice of medicine, during which time he was local, but soon returned to the regular work. Among the several charges he served we mention the following: Braxton, Glenville, West Union, and Harrisville. Such was his fidelity and usefulness that he served several circuits more than one term. The period in which he did his best service embraced times that tried men's souls; but he stood firm at the post of duty with the devotion of a moral hero. He enjoyed and preached a full gospel, and as a result he saw many souls converted and the Church built up under his ministry. He never was happier than when in a genuine revival, pointing sinners to the Lamb that taketh away the sin of the world, and leading Israel's host to battle and to victory. His preaching was often in power and in demonstration of the Spirit. His soul was so aflame with divine love that it might have been said of him, "The zeal of the Lord was a fire shut up in his bones." In 1883 he was placed on the supernumerary list, and in 1885 his name appears on the superannuated list, which relation he sustained to the day of his departure. For the last few years he was greatly afflicted, but his faith in God never faltered. Often, in reviewing the scenes of his active ministry, his soul throbbed with joy, and, forgetting his infirmities for the moment, he seemed ready to enter the battle again. He finally came down gently to the banks of Jordan, and passed over to the promised land in great peace, surrounded by his loved ones. Brother McCutchen belonged to a class of preachers who are the connecting link between the active ministers of to-day and the pioneer fathers who planted Methodism from the northern lakes to the southern coast of this continent. And as they fall, one by one, we would pause amid the rush and activities of this age of push and hurry to drop a tear upon their graves, and thank God for the grace which sustained them in life and death.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the past year? John Rhyne. 1.

JOHN RHYNE was born in Lee county, N. C., February 16, 1821; and died in Booneville, Logan county, Ark., July 25, 1894. He was licensed to preach when about thirty years of age, at Wesley Chapel—John Cowl, presiding elder, John J. Pittman, preacher in charge. He was admitted into the Arkansas Conference at Camden, November, 1851; was ordained deacon November 20, 1853, at Tulip, Ark., by Bishop Andrew; ordained elder October 28, 1855, by Bishop Pierce. Served the Waldron Circuit 1852; Lewisburg Circuit, 1853; Little Rock Circuit, 1854; Pocahontas Station, 1855; Jacksonport Station, 1856-57; Fayetteville Station, 1858; Searcy Station, 1860; received a superannuated relation in the fall of 1861; was appointed to Fort Smith in 1862, but was unable to go. His last work as an effective preacher was at Searcy, 1867-68. He was afterwards Bible Agent for the American Bible Society, 1869-71. Brother Rhyne was married to Miss Hattie J. Neely, of White county, Ark., February 10, 1864. God gave them two children to bless and brighten their home, one of whom is still living (Mrs. Jane Cochran, of Booneville), the other, with the mother, who only lived about five years, preceded him to the home of the good, where they were watching and waiting to welcome him. He was married June 1, 1870, to Miss E. A. Neely, half-sister of his first wife, with whom he spent the remainder of his days. He was a man of more than ordinary gifts, and in the days of vigor his preaching was attended with great power. In his last days he had the ministry of loving hearts and gentle hands, and through the valley of death we trust the Great Shepherd was with him.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration? Their names were called over, one by one, and their characters examined and passed, except that of G. W. Smith, who was expelled from the ministry and membership of the Church.

Ques. 21. What is the number of local preachers and members in the several circuits, stations, and missions of the Conference?
